Returns From Survey.—Taggart Aston, chief engineer of the Coos Bay and Eastern Electric returned yesterday from a visit to his various survey camps. Good progress is being made.

Eye Is Better.—Word was received this morning from Mrs. C. O. Gooney that their little son's eye is improving. The sight isn't entirely gone, so there is hopes of yet saving it. This is certainly good news for Mr. Gooney and family as well as to their many friends.

May Open Mine.—As a result of coal prices along the coast being better than in many years and the demand greater, Pat Hennessey is figuring on opening a new mine. He has some valuable coal lands on the peninsula, near the old Libby vein, the workings of which he superintended for years.

First Test Success.—The first test of the electric donkey engine by the Sm Powers company was a success. The engine pulling itself up the steep embankment on the east side of Isthmus Inlet. Some trouble is being encountered in securing electricity to work it to its maximum power. So far, though, the experiments have been very successful.

Catches Big Salmon.—A. P. Owen, who is down from his South Coos River home, reports that the other day he finally caught a thirty-pound silverside salmon that got away with about 130 feet of line. The salmon was hooked well with the troll, and Mr. Owen watched for the line after he lost the big fish and pretty soon he was able to get hold of the end of it. The salmon towed him 200 or 300 yards and got tired, and Mr. Owen worked in near the island and got ashore and finally landed the big fellow on the sand.
