SUMNER AND VOLCKMAN PLEASED WITH OUTLOOK FOR RAILWAY

VICE-PRESIDENT OF PACIFIC COAST STILL HOPES TO START ACTUAL CONSTRUCTION.

ATTEMPT TO BLOCK LINE RUMORED BUT IS DENIED

ENGINEER SUMNER DISCOUNTS REPORT THAT VISIT OF REPRESENTATIVES IS ON ACCOUNT.

RUMOR IS DENIED.

A report in circulation here today was that the visit of Mr. Volckman at this time was to make a personal report to the foreign syndicate backing the project. It was claimed that some rival line, presumably the Southern Pacific, had endeavored to block the financing of the road. Mr. Sumner represents and as a result of this, the foreign capitalists had sent Mr. Volckman to personally investigate it for them. Vice-president Sumner or Mr. Volckman could not be seen about this report but Engineer Sumner said that he did not believe that there was anything to it.

Declaring that everything was progressing most satisfactorily and that he still had hopes of being able to start actual construction this fall and possibly to prosecute the tunnel work throughout the winter, Vice-president H. A. Sumner of the Pacific Coast Line and Pacific Great Western who arrived here yesterday with G. W. Volckman, personal representative of the English and French capitalists who are backing the project, was enthusiastic over the situation. However, he was reticent relative to the plans of the company and said that he had "nothing new" to give out.

"I do not care to talk for publication," remarked Mr. Sumner when seen at The Chandler last evening. "We are not selling any stock in the road and are not asking for anything. Besides, I have been informed that activity on our part or anyone else tends to hamper the Southern Pacific's activities and as we do not care to rouse them, it perhaps would be best to say nothing."

Mr. Volckman was not very communicative. He is decidedly English in his dress, manner and talk. He was enthusiastic over the immense stand of timber they had seen in coming over the route from Eugene to Florence and thence down the coast, and of the fertile valleys and the climatic conditions.

"I was in Cuba a few weeks ago where it was intensely hot and then went northward to Canada where it was quite cool so I can appreciate the equable climate here," remarked Mr. Volckman. "The stand of timber was wonderful and the productiveness of the valleys when the timber is gone I am told is equally remarkable. It is a great country. This is the first time I have visited this section. I have visited Canada number of times and been out along the Canadian railways and the extensions of the railways there. The people of Canada are great boosters and advertisers. In almost every shop window in Great Britain, you can see large circulars advertising Canada."

Mr. Volckman said that he hoped to visit this section again soon. He has to be in New York the latter part of October and will probably return from there to London. He and Mr. Sumner will leave on the Breakwater Saturday for Portland.

Yesterday was spent in visiting the North Bend mills and factories, and today Mr. Sumner and Mr. Volckman will visit the Smith mills and plants and as much of this section as they can. They are securing some fine views of this section with which Mr. Volckman can best tell the story of the country their line will tap. Mr. Sumner has also gathered a lot of data relative to this section.

Although neither Mr. Sumner nor Mr. Volckman did not say it was the case, Mr. Volckman's expressions of familiarity with Canadian railways might be taken as an intimation tending to confirm the report circulated sometime ago that the North Coast Line was a project of the Canadian Pacific for reaching San Francisco. That report had it that the Hill lines and Milwaukie might also unite in it.

Get Right-of-Way. Mr. Sumner stated that Ralph Hunt, who has been working on the Florence-Eugene section of the road

FISHERMEN GO FREE.

Judge Coke Decides In Favor of Sam Nass' Employes In Case.

In the foreign fisherman case from near Bandon, Judge J. S. Coke has rendered a decision upholding the fisherman. The fishermen contended that the law under which they were being prosecuted was unconstitutional and also that in the eyes of the law the men were not the fishermen but that the owner of the nets they were operating, Sam Nass, was the real fisherman. Judge Coke held the law constitutional but upheld the latter contention. Nass who operates the cannery on the lower Coquille had all the licenses taken out in his name but they were for the nets. He then hired the foreigners to watch the nets.

WOMAN DIES SOON AFTER ARRIVAL

MRS. MAGGIE FRYE, FIRST THOUGHT TO BE SUFFERING FROM SEASICKNESS, SUC-CUMBS AT MERCY HOSPITAL.

Mrs. Maggie Frye, who arrived in North Bend Sunday on the Alliance from Portland died early this morning at Mercy hospital. Apparently the cause of death was stomach trouble or an obstruction of the bowels.

Mrs. Frye was a stranger and as near as can be learned came to the Bay to act as housekeeper for a North Bend man named Jack Dickehmas. When she arrived, she was apparently suffering severely from seasickness. She went to the Oregon hotel where it was still thought she was suffering from seasickness and not until last evening was she taken to the hospital.

She was a woman of apparently thirty-five or forty years old. A letter found among her effects was addressed to her at 185 Mill street, Portland. Another letter found indicated that she has a daughter, Mrs. L. M. Reynolds, living at Sacramento, Cal. Undertaker G. W. Dungan is endeavoring to communicate with the latter today.

Mr. Dickehmas is employed at the North Bend livery stables. When called up by The Times today, he said that he knew very little about Mrs. Frye. He said he had advertised for a housekeeper and she had answered it. He sent her the money to come to North Bend with the understanding it was to be deducted from her wages. Further than this, he said he knew nothing. He has some baggage that belongs to her but it has never been opened.
