Monday evening at the Odd Fellows' Lodge [illegible] the Women of Woodcraft held their meeting, the purpose being the initiation of four new members. After the regular routine of business, duty gave way to pleasure, and one of the most delightful of Hallowe'en entertainments resulted. The hall was decorated extensively in green and red and yellow, and was dark except for the light of jack-o'lanterns that were hung about the walls. The dining room was particularly striking, the tables being set in the form of a cross and covered only with yellow-cut flowers and designs. Yellow crepe paper streamers connected the chandeliers with tiny place cards of pumpkins and witches faces, and a huge pumpkin stood in the center of the cross. Even the refreshments, egg-sandwiches, carried out the color scheme, while the guards, dressed in their ghost attire, heightened the Hallowe'en effect. Nearly the whole membership was present and united in making the initiation of the four new members, whose names were withheld, a memorable event.

—o—

The A. N. W. Club met Thursday with Mrs. E. G. Flanagan. There was a good attendance of members and two guests were present, Mrs. H. Folsom and Mrs. Chas. McKnight. Mrs. Chas. Dungan was elected to membership after having been for some years on the Honorary list, while she was unable to attend the meetings. She extended an invitation to the club to meet with her next Thursday for a salmon bake at her home on South Coos River. A special boat will leave at ten o'clock on that day and return at four in the afternoon. After the business meet- refreshments were served .

—o—

DIES IN NORTH BEND

John Carlson, a Sailor ,Passes Aaway Alone in Poverty .

John Carlson, a former sailor, who was found dying late Tuesday in a little hovel in the suburbs of North Bend was buried in the Odd Fellows cemetery yesterday afternoon. Lack of food and attention coupled with pneumonia were the causes of death. He was apparently about fifty years old. Papers found on him indicate that he came to Coos Bay about two months ago from Grays Harbor, Wash. He was native of Sweden but nothing was found to indicate where his relatives reside.
