DOUBLE CRIME OF SOMNAMBULIST

San Francisco Man Kills Wife and Commits Suicide—Motive For Deed Shrouded in Mystery.

(By Associated Press to Coos Bay Times.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 8.—John Ward Cooper, a lathing contractor, murdered his wife in his sleep in their home early today and then killed himself with a razor. Mrs. Cooper was slain with a lathing hatchet. Miss Anna Hughes, a boarder, heard the woman pleading with her husband "wake up" not to kill her. Miss Hughes attempted to enter but the door was locked. She stood outside and heard the blows when Mrs. Cooper was struck. Hysterical from fright and horror, Miss Hughes called the Central Emergency hospital, and an ambulance was rushed to the house. The police had already reached the place and found Mrs. Cooper and Cooper dying. Seven gashes were cut in the woman's skull, her arm broken, the fingers of one hand cut off and the body was a beaten mass of bruises. The family had lived happily. Cooper was quiet and orderly in his habits and never had shown signs of mental unbalance. The case of somnambulism, or insanity, made more extraordinary a crime that apparently had been planned with great deliberation, as Cooper aroused their seven-year-old daughter and carried her out of the room before he attacked Mrs. Cooper, telling the child to remain quiet.

Two other daughters aged 23 and 16 years old heard their mother's plea for mercy, but the door was closed so they were unable to enter.

Mr. Maupin, who is to have charge of the drilling, was present and stated that he would be ready to start work within a short time after the organization is perfectly. He is enthusiastic over it and is confident that oil will be found at considerably less than the depth of about 1,800 feet which the surfaces indication show.

D. J. Rees recently send some of the oil stone found by them on Catching Inlet to oil experts at Coalinga, Cal., and they have informed him that the oil stone is genuine and a sure indication of oil.

The next meeting, when the organization is to be perfected will be held two weeks from this evening.

Some of those present last evening favored having the Marshfield Chamber of Commerce subscribe for part of the balance of the stock that remains unsold.

CHAS. HILBORN PASSES AWAY

One of Oldest Pioneers of Southwestern Oregon Died Last Night at Millicoma.

Charles S. Hilborn, one of the oldest pioneers of Southwestern Oregon and Coos county and one of the most highly respected men in this section, died at his ranch home at Millicoma at 11 o'clock last evening after a lingering illness of a complication of diseases incident to his advanced years. He was almost ninety-two years old.

The news of his death today brought forth expressions of deep regret from all of the older residents of the community who had known, loved and admired the venerable pioneer. The expressions of regret were coupled with those of sympathy for the venerable wife who is held in like esteem.

The shock is keenly felt by Mrs. Hilborn but she is bearing up well under the ordeal. They had been married over fifty-one years and the devotion of the couple to each other and the happiness that has always been theirs together has always resulted in their being held up as the "model man and wife" by their friends.

Charles S. Hilborn, was born in Oxford county, Maine, January 16, 1820. Mr. Hilborn received his education in the district schools there, and at eighteen years of age, left his father's home and became a sailor, sailing around Cape Horn to San Francisco in 1852. He engaged in mining in California for four years. In 1856 he went to Curry county, Oregon, and followed lightering and teaming at Port Orford for three years. February 19, 1860, Mr. Hilborn was married to Emma A. Dyer, who was born October 15, 1836, at Cincinnati, Ohio. In 1859 she came to Oregon with her parents by way of the Isthmus of Panama and settled in Curry county. Mr. and Mrs. Hilborn began house-keeping in Curry county, where they lived four years, and in 1864 removed to Canyon City, residing there for one year, then moved to The Dalles, and finally came to Coos county.

No children were ever born to Mr. and Mrs. Hilborn and aside from three nephews and the widow, no near relatives survive him on this coast.

Mr. and Mrs. Hilborn first came to Coos county in 1866 and homesteaded the ranch where they have lived continuously since entry in 1867.

Henry Watterson, Confederate Veteran, Presents Heroic Statue to Kentucky.

(By Associated Press to the Coos Bay Times.)

FRANKFORT, Ky., Nov. 8.—While President Taft of the United States and a large assembly, including many of those who wore the gray in the conflict between the north and the south, looked on today, an heroic bronze statue of Abraham Lincoln was unveiled in the capitol building here.

"Proof of a reunited country," said Governor Willson of Kentucky, in accepting the statue on behalf of the state, "is made evident in the selection of Henry Watterson, a confederate soldier, to formally present this image of the great president to the people of his native state. The greatness and goodness, the nobility and sweetness that became Lincoln are recognized as earnestly by those who wore the gray as by those who wore the blue."

The unveiling of the Lincoln statue in the rotunda of the new Kentucky capitol preceded the dedication of the Lincoln memorial at Hodgenville, Ky., by a day. Near Hodgenville is the Lincoln farm, where the cabin in which Lincoln was born is now preserved in a monumental structure recently completed. It is the dedication of this memorial which will attract Taft and others to Hodgenville tomorrow.

President Taft Speaks.

In his address, President Taft referred to Lincoln as having possessed an ideal judicial mind.

"The South knows and the North knows, now, there is no soul," said the president, "that united them in perfect amity like that of Abraham Lincoln. The South knows that every administration that removes another cause of misunderstanding between the sections or that brings them closer together in any way, is acting under the inspiration of him who could love his country with undiminished ardor, when nearly one-half was seeking to destroy its integrity."

Judge Bordwell repeated the request and Mendenhall muttered that he thought he ought not to be compelled to serve. Judge Bordwell ruled he would take the excuses under consideration later, and ordered the men sworn. Immediately after the talesmen were sworn, the court, by agreement of the counsel took talesmen into his chambers one at a time and heard the excuses. Clark claimed physical disability. He was returned to the box. Mendenhall pleaded the probable fatal illness of his mother. Both Clark and Mendenhall were excused, but Lisk was retained.
