SUCCESS AND HONESTY.

Mr. Reginald John Campbell, the London divine who seems to have a fondness for making sweeping statements, has declared a man can not be successful in a business way and honest at the same time.

"Conditions in the business world," said Dr. Campbell, "are such today that the business man must take gross advantage of his competitors or go the wall. Competition is too keen. As a matter of fact, no successful business man in modern times can be honest."

Of course there may be differences of opinion regarding what constitutes honesty, but the stuff that bears the test of the modern commercial world is not such a bad variety. There are differences in standards of honesty, but the man without any standard or with no regard for those of others, soon finds himself called to account in the business world.

The complexity of business only tends to increase the truth of the old saying that "honesty is the best policy." Sharper of all sorts find a less and less profitable field as the country becomes steadily more closely related and the common necessities of commercial intercourse demand a common recognition of the fundamentals of fair play which is only another name for honesty.

Seven out of ten people who visit a country town visit it with the hope of making a profit; seven out of ten who visit a city visit it to spend money.

HERE'S TO A SONG IN THE RAIN

"Man wants but little here out West,
But he wants that little long;
A good long slicker, a rubber vest,
A rain-proof helmet that slopes
Southwest,
Some right tight shingles above his nest,
And down in his heart a song.

A song to the chill from the Cascade's top,
And the warm wet kiss from the sea;
The trailing clouds with their skirts asop,
Heaven's dew-dipped curtains, that drip and drop,
The valley fogs with their silver sloop
And the drip of the damp fir tree.

Then here's to the back of the canvas duck
And the tree toad's moist refrain;
And here's to the man that keeps his pluck,
Though wet to the waist band and stalled in the muck;
Who never gets soggy or down on his luck,
The soul that can sing in the rain."

NATIONAL HONOR.

PROFESSOR Hosmer, writing of interesting incidents in the life of Seward, recalls that he was an earnest advocate of a foreign war in the troublous times of the early sixties as a means of bringing the north and south together.

If the history of all recent wars were written, how many of them would have more worthy inspiration?

Eliminate the aims of political leaders and the rivalries of thrones, and the disposition to grab territory, and there would be little left to explain the wars of history.

THE MAN OF MARSHFIELD

(Written for the Times)

He has wandered 'round the country, chased the Moros tho' the glade, toiled and struggled in Alaska, laden down with pick and spade; eaten heartily of leather, boiled beneath the Midnight Sun, chewed the paw-paw and persimmon, eaten rice "shot from a gun." He has braved Sahara's desert, crossed Siberia in a chaise; braved the mystic Indian jungle, risked the deadly London haze. He has been through storm and shipwreck, earthquakes, floods, and fires a few, he's been frozen in the Arctic, melted in the Torrids, too.

All these met he without a waver, never once he turned aside,—but, he pauses, pale and trembling for real dangers now betide: he has learned that fierce bacilli, Colon kind, are in the mains, they are the kind that gnaw your vitals, drink your blood and give you pains.

Some b'g doctor with a spy-glass, in a most unhappy hour, found these monsters in our water, seeking whom they might devour. Warned he then the Man of Marshfield, brought to him a fearful dream, that is why his nerve is falling. Things are not just what they seem.
Nov. 14th, 1911. (Willie)

BE TRUE TO BETTER INSTINCTS

BUT if a man is true to his better instincts or sentiments and refuses the dominion of facts, as one that comes of a higher race; remains fast by the Soul and sees the Principle, then the facts fall aptly and supple into their places; they know their Master and the meanness of them glorifies Him.—Emerson.

KAISER REPRIMANDS SON.

Crown Prince of Germany Rebuked For His Attitude.

(By Associated Press to Coos Bay Times.)

BERLIN, Germany, Nov. 13.—A public and semi-official rebuke has been administered to Crown Prince Frederick William through an inspired telegram from Berlin published in the Cologne-Gazette, which fully confirms the report that Emperor William reprimanded his son for having openly demonstrated his approval of the attacks on the government's Moroccan policy and the bellicose utterances in the Reichstag Thursday.

NEWS OF ARAGO AND VICINITY.

Mr. Jones, who lately came here from Texas and who was so seriously injured while hauling logs last July, was removed to Coquille City a short time ago, in order to be nearer medical aid. He is reported to be improving slowly.

Completing an eight months' term of her home at Arago Saturday after completing an eight months' time of school at Allegany.

Miss Maud Albee is stopping with Mrs. Glenn Collier at present.

Miss Hazel Radabaugh, who is attending High school at Coquille City, spent Sunday with her parents.

The Halloween social held near the Methodist church, South, on November 4, was a decided success. Much merriment was caused by those wearing masks.

Miss Dalla Clinton is teaching a very successful term of school at Flisstrap. There is rumor of the Lyceum and Debating society being reorganized soon.

He Got the Job

A young man having applied to a wholesale house for a position recently found himself before the manager for examination. "Have you a bank account?" was his first question. "I have," was the reply. "Let me see your bank book," was the next request. After glancing over it and noting the long list of regular, though small deposits, he said: "Young man, you are engaged, and I want to compliment you on your saving ability. I always insist upon employing only men who have the good sense to save their money." We invite every young man in this community to open an account at this bank.
