COOS BAY TO BE TERMINAL OF NORTHWESTERN

NEW TRANSCONTINENTAL RAILWAY IS HASTENING TO REACH HERE

English Syndicate Reported to Be Acquiring Property Here Now For It.

SUMNER LINE MAY BE LOCAL CONNECTION

The story that Coos Bay is to be the Pacific Coast terminal of the Northwestern Railway received by The Times today tends to confirm rumors to the effect that the Sumner line, the Pacific Great Western and North Coast, are really the project of the Hill and other systems.

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 21.—The Evening Telegram prints the following today: "Further unmasking of the plans of the Chicago and Northwestern in its invasion of the Pacific Coast country has come through the discovery of the fact that the construction crews which are rushing the grade of the Pittsburg and Gilmore line down the Salmon river, are being paid with Northwestern money. Apparently, the Pacific and Gilmore line is a Hill property, but the connection is close between the Hill and the Northwestern which also had established their personnel surveying parties which have been running lines through Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, Washington and across Oregon in an effort to bring another transcontinental line to the coast."

FLOOD CONDITIONS OF PUGET SOUND

Seattle Without Water Supply or Electric Lights—Fair Weather Promises Relief Soon.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 21.—After fifteen days of almost continuous storm, beautiful weather is prevailing in Western Washington with no rain in immediate prospect. The greater part of the city of Seattle will be without water until Saturday night, owing to the breaking of the pipe that carries the city water supply across the Cedar river. The schools are closed, bath tubs are used only for the storage of a water supply and the streets are dark at night, because the municipal power and light plants are temporarily out of commission.

William Randolph Hearst was branded as an enemy of the organized labor. Hearst's name was brought before the convention in connection with a lockout of union men at Lead, South Dakota, by the Homestead Mining company, in which the Hearst estate is interested. James M. The above summarizes the result of the Marshfield city caucus last night and all the candidates receiving twenty-five votes or more will have their names printed on the ticket if they qualify.

The caucus was the largest ever held in Marshfield. In all, 312 votes were cast but there were probably more than 350 people in the hall, some not being qualified to vote and some not going to the bother of standing in line to cast their vote. J. M. Upton was the unanimous choice for chairman, and G. W. Kaufman was unanimously elected secretary. There was not the slightest indication of a clash during the evening.

The final mode of procedure was similar to that of a regular primary election, the only difference being that the voters had to write in the names of the candidates on blank ballots instead of marking printed ballots.

Three Cornered Race. As a result of the caucus, the race for mayor becomes a three-cornered one. Up until late yesterday, it was thought by some that both Cople and Straw would withdraw and let W. U. Douglas make the race against E. Don McCrary, the socialist choice. Mr. Cople agreed to this program but Straw's friends would not consent to it.

Some stated yesterday that Mr. Straw had wired friends here to withdraw his name but Ivy Condron received a telegram from him last evening stating that he would run if Mr. Condron would gain Mrs. Straw's consent. Mrs. Straw finally consented to it.

Mr. Condron and other supporters of Mayor Straw express confidence that he will be an easy victor. R. A. Cople's friends declare that the outcome of the caucus last night indicates that Cople will win easily. They claim that Straw should have received two votes to Cople's one in the caucus. Furthermore, they claim that much of Straw's strength was represented there through the efforts of the Straw meeting in the Redmen's hall last Friday evening and point out that the fact that the vote of Straw and Coke, the two candidates declared for at that meeting, was the same, substantiates their claim that much work was done before the caucus to get out the Straw vote. They claim that little or no work was done in Mr. Cople's behalf owing to the expectancy that a compromise would be effected whereby W. U. Douglas would be the harmony candidate.

The Socialist also are expressing elation today over the showing they made and their leaders claim that only a small portion of their strength was voted at the caucus. As near as could be determined to (Continued on page 4.)
