John S. Rogers Arrested For Killing and Robbing San Francisco Man.

(From Associated Press to Coos Bay Times.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 23.—Evidence that convinces the police and detectives that John S. Rogers, one of the men arrested last night in connection with the murder of Benj. A. Goodman, the jewelry salesman, whose body was found in a gutter Tuesday morning, knows much concerning the crime, was found today in the basement of a commission house where Rogers is employed. A pair of blood soaked overalls that were found were admitted by Rogers to be his, but said the blood was that of wild game he had handled. In contradiction his employers said they never handled wild game. Also in the basement, the detectives found a gold watch to which was attached a price tag of the Brilliant Jewelry company by whom Goodman was employed. Several tags of a similar nature were scattered in one corner of the basement. Rogers admitted knowing Goodman well.

Fix arrived early and soon was followed by the father and brother of the condemned man, and the attorneys who defended him at the trial. His spiritual advisers, however, express the opinion that if Beattie really is guilty of the murder of his wife he will acknowledge it before the fatal current is switched on. The elder Beattie said he still believed his son innocent and it is a question whether the young man does not consider he owes it to his father, to whom he has brought so much pain, trouble and disgrace, to go to his death with sealed lips.

HYPNOTIC CASE NOW ON TRIAL

Pitiful Tale of San Bernardino Girl Brings Murmurs of Sympathy.

(From Associated Press to Coos Bay Times.)

SAN BERNARDINO, Nov. 23.—With a pitiless directness that searched her innermost soul and brought murmurs of sympathy from the large throng of women who made up the majority of the trial audience, Attorney John Campbell cross examined today Miss Jessie McDonald, the alleged "hypnotic slave" of Dr. Arthur W. McDavid, a dentist, who is being tried on a charge resulting in the girl's confinement for sixteen months in a room adjoining his office. Going back to the beginning of her acquaintance with McDavid five years ago, Campbell forced Miss McDonald to admit that after the dentist, who was treating her teeth, threatened to "kiss her" if she bit him, her teeth closed on his fingers.

"But I did not mean to bite him," she cried. The girl told, sobbingly, of the battle she alleged she had with the dentist and of having been overcome by his strength and then soothed by the "love light in his eyes and the tenderness in his voice."

"I was a good girl," she added weeping. "If you were in that room for sixteen months," went on Campbell, "an unwilling prisoner, why did you not try to escape?"

"I was afraid of him," the girl replied. "I thought if I appealed for help he would take me away and I would never be heard of again. He was going to take me away the week in which papa found and rescued me."

Miss McDonald vehemently denied that she had sought the dentist. "But he made me love him," she declared. The girl testified she was afraid to use the telephone in McDavid's office to summon help and "besides I depended on his promise to divorce his wife and marry me," she said.
