PRESERVING LIFE.

OFTEN the rush and nerve-wearing exertions or modern conditions together with the increasing fatality of accidents, lead one to wonder whether human life won't just naturally wear itself out in its own mad haste to get most of existence while it is passing.

But opposed to this destructive tendency of much of our modern living, are the new precautions, the remarkable discoveries and the intelligent progress in a thousand directions by which science and medical skill are tending to prolong human existence and alleviate human suffering.

Fifty years ago the soldiers of the civil war were dying of typhoid fever by hundreds. In contrast to the newspaper records of the death rate of that time comes the recent statement that the entire United States army, officers and privates alike, is to be inoculated against this pernicious disease of the camps, and marines.

This is only an instance of the manifold increase of sanitary and health-producing discoveries. And there is his consolation about the whole thing, that if modern life tends to become unhealthfully strenuous, it is much better to wear out than rust out.

BOTTOM DROPS OUT OF TURKEY MARKET

ROSEBURG, Ore., Nov. 24.—Flooding of the Northwest buying centers with turkeys from Middle Western states has sent the Roseburg market tumbling to the lowest point in years.

NEW LINE IS COMPLETED.

San Pedro Railway Completes Great Engineering Feat.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 21.—A spike was driven in a tie out in Southeastern Nevada Sunday which marked the perfection of one of the most stupendous feats of railroad construction accomplished in recent years—the completion of the San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake railroad's new "High Line" through the Meadow Valley Wash.

In the World's engineering and construction history, Western America occupies a place prominent, presenting the most striking examples where skill and perseverance have overcome seemingly unsurmountable obstacles of nature. And the construction of the Salt Lake Route's "High Line" occupies the same relative position in respect to Western railroad construction as does the latter to the remainder of the world.

The story of the efforts of the Salt Lake route in building and maintaining its line through this old Mormon pass reads like a chapter from Mediaeval history. It might even be entitled "The Conquest of Science and Progress over the Vandals of the Mountains." For in the past seven years this fight has been waged continually between the science and skill of engineers and the unreasonable mountain torrents, whose canyon was usurped, first by the Mormons and later by the railroad which now so closely joins the west and the middle-west.

The work that has been accomplished seems well nigh supernatural. In thirteen months seventy-six miles of modern railroad has been placed in commission; seventy-six miles of line, containing ten tunnels, totaling 5972 feet in length; and twenty-four bridges built of solid steel and installed on gigantic concrete abutments and piers which are sunk to bedrock.

The old line crossed Meadow Valley creek eighty five times—the new line but twenty-four times. Throughout its entire length, the new line winds around the walls of the canyon, far above the encroachments of the stream. Whenever the necessity exists to cross to the opposite wall or, by any chance the peculiar nature of the canyon seems likely to give the water added force, titanic bridges and concrete retaining walls are in place.

The portion of the Salt Lake's route between Los Angeles and Salt Lake City covered by the "High Line" has long been a show place in the west. Scenery of the finest, punctuated here and there by romantic little Mormon frontier towns sustains the interest of the traveler from the moment the speeding trains enter the pass at Crestline until they emerge into the beautiful Las Vegas Valley eighty odd miles below.

It was to save this stretch of mountain scenery for the eastern traveler that the officials of the Salt Lake company authorized the expenditure of five millions of dollars more on a stretch of track which had already eaten up seven millions of dollars in losses and repairs besides its original cost.

A MAIL CARRIER'S LOAD

Seems heavier when he has a weak back and kidney trouble. Fred Duehren, mail carrier at Atchison, Kansas, says:—"I have been bothered with kidney and bladder trouble and had a severe pain across my back. Whenever I carried a heavy load of mail, my kidney trouble increased. Some time ago, I started taking Foley's Kidney Pills and since taking them I have gotten entirely rid of all my kidney trouble and am as sound now as ever."

BOND ISSUE HELD VALID.

Jackson County Court's Development Plans Approved.

MEDFORD, Ore., Nov. 24.—Jackson county's $1,500,000 bond issue for good roads has been declared legal by Judge Calkins, in the circuit court, the decision overruling the demurrer filed by Ed Andrews by Attorneys Neff and Reames. Judge Calkins says that the whole burden of the plaintiff's objection is that the county acted without authority in calling the bond election in that the constitutional amendment is not self-acting, but requires legislation to provide methods of carrying out its provisions. The court declares in his opinion:

"A county is a body politic and corporate, with powers to make necessary contracts and do necessary acts concerning property and concerns. The county court has full authority over roads. It is contended that the county has no affirmative authority in law to create indebtedness, but I think that is erroneous. That right is not only recognized in the statutes in the provisions for caring for such indebtedness, county warrants, but is also generally recognized by the decisions of the supreme court. I think there is no question that the county has the right to create indebtedness for the improvement of its roads, as long as it does not exceed any constitutional limits in that regard.

"The next question is, can the county issue bonds for such indebtedness? If the county were to issue its bonds and place the money in the treasury before creating the indebtedness, there might be some question; but the order of the court states that the bonds should be so drawn and disposed of as not to be issued or to draw interest until the money should be actually received therefor, and so expended for such permanent roads."

DROPS DEAD AT ELKTON.

Logger en Route to Gardiner Suddenly Succumbs.

ROSEBURG, Ore., Nov. 24.—Coroner N. T. Jewett received a message from Elkton to the effect that a stranger—identified through papers as J. Harvinze, dropped dead while en route from Drain to Gardiner Tuesday afternoon. According to the message the fellow was walking from Drain to Gardiner in company with two companions, and had nearly reached the summit of Elkton hill, when he suddenly uttered a faint cry and fell to the ground. When picked up a minute later life was extinct. The remains were taken to Elkton, where they are being held awaiting word from relatives who have been notified. Inasmuch as death was due to natural causes, Coroner Jewett deemed an inquest unnecessary, and so informed the authorities at Elkton. While nothing is known of the deceased in the vicinity of Elkton, it is the general presumption that he was headed for Gardiner where he expected to secure employment in the mills or logging camps. He was poorly dressed and was apparently a laborer. He had but little money upon his person.

MUST STAND TRIAL.

Noted Labor Contempt Case Will Be Tried Again.

By Associated Press to the Coos Bay Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 23.—Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and Frank Morrison, the labor leaders, must again stand trial in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia on charges of contempt arising out of the Buck Stove and Range case. Justice Wright handed down a decision today overruling the motion of the labor leaders for dismissal of the proceedings under the statute of limitations. The court held that contempt of court is not classed as criminal and consequently not subject to the bar of the statute limitations.

The Supreme Court of the United States recently dismissed the original cases against Messrs. Gompers, Mitchell, and Morrison but gave the lower court right to renew the proceedings. At this time the controversy between the stove company and the American Federation of labor had been settled. Justice Wright today gave the respondents three days in which to agree with the committee of prosecutors on the appointment of a commissioner to hear the evidence.

SON NOT NAMED.
