Principles And Not Personality

IT'S A long cry to hark back from a municipal campaign in Marshfield to the romance and glory of Rome but I am urged to it by the truth involved. I find in my old friend Epictetus so clever and clear an expression of my own ideas on this campaign that I am constrained to use them.

WHEN a certain person came to him, who was going up to Rome on account of a suit which had regard to his rank, Epictetus inquired the reason of his going to Rome, and the man then asked what he thought about the matter. Epictetus replied: If you ask me what you will do in Rome, whether you will succeed or fail, I have no rule about this. But if you ask me how you will fare, I can tell you: if you have right opinions, you will fare well; if they are false, you will fare ill. For to every man the cause of his acting is opinion.

Then you will say, I met with Epictetus as I should meet with a stone or a statue; for you saw me and nothing more. But he meets with a man as a man, who learns his opinions, and in his turn shows his own. Learn my opinions; show me yours; and then say that you have visited me. Let us examine one another: if I have any bad opinion, take it away; if you have any, show it. This is the meaning of meeting with a philosopher. Not so (you say); but this is only a passing visit, and while we are hiring the vessel, we can also see Epictetus. Let us see what he says. Then you go away and say: Epictetus was nothing; he used solecisms and spoke in a barbarous way. For of what else do you come as judges? Well, but a man says to me, if I attend to such matters (as you do), I shall have no land as you have none; I shall have no silver cups as you have none, nor fine beasts as you have none.

What constitutes a state? What constitutes a city? What made the glory that was Greece, the grandeur that was Rome, the power that is America?

Not money, not fleets, not armies, but men with principles and opinions.

Not men intent only on the wealth of field and forest, mine and mart and factory though the development of resources is well worth the toil and wealth is worthy means to noble ends. But men intent also on the fine wealth of principle and character and pure, strong government for the whole people.

R. A. COPPLE says: "Ist. I favor the city owning and controlling the water system. The health of the community is of too great importance to be placed at the mercy of any private corporation in which the consideration of cost and profit must have so large a part. We have had an example of this within the past year. According to the report of our health officers, the health of our people was jeopardized and yet no move of any consequence was made to remedy the foul condition."

DR. E. E. STRAW says: "To avoid any possible excuse for further misunderstanding I will now say that I will use my honest endeavor to get this whole matter before the people of this community as soon as practical for their vote upon the same; that I will use every endeavor possible to get something tangible before the voters with such reliable information as may be necessary in order to allow them to vote intelligently upon the whole question, and will cheerfully and energetically carry out to the best of my ability whatever decision the people make."

Manchus and Chinese Leaders Dissatisfied With Yuan Shi Kai's Work.

CLAIM HE PLANS TO USE SEVERE MEANS

Moderates Claim That War Would Be Over Only For His Policies.

REBELS ARE VICTORS. (By Associated Press.) SHANGHAI, Nov. 25.—The rebels captured Tiger Hill just outside of Nanking today after a fierce attack. The government troops retreated. The hill commands Nanking and the rebel fire may seriously damage it. (By Associated Press to Coos Bay Times.) PEKIN, China, Nov. 25.—Premier Yuan Shi Kai's position is becoming more intolerable daily. Neither the Manchus nor Chinese trust him and the Manchus are becoming more suspicious. The moderates do not hesitate to say that if he had remained at Chang Te Fu, the court would now be at Jehel and the rebellion ended.

Many Chinese believe that while Yuan is reassuring the foreigners with a view to obtaining a loan and placating the moderates with pretended pacific measures, he is in reality intending on sternly crushing the rebellion with force. Continued fighting at Hankow and near Nanking is taken as lending color to this belief. The Imperialists after the attack on Hankow had lasted thirty-six hours were repulsed Thursday and driven back across the Hankow river with a great loss.

(By Associated Press to Coos Bay Times.)

They inspected his plant and one took several aviation lessons. Wilcox says he expects aeroplanes will be used to drop explosives into the cities held by the Imperialists, in addition to performing other duties.
