SALEM, Ore., Jan. 26. - The Supreme Court reversed the lower court of Jackson county and knocked out the proposed $1,500,000 bond issue for the construction of permanent roads, which was authorized by the people of the county at a special election. The court decided the issue was unconstitutional. It held that the initiative law under which the bonds carried was all right, but that it did not provide for the holding of such an election.

This is the second serious blow rough trip down the coast. She delivered by the Supreme Court to the ambitious plans of Jackson county citizens.
