Just the Thing.
 "Your husband can take some solid food now."
 "Oh, why were they thrown out?"
 "What are you speaking of?"
 "That batch of biscuits I made when we were first married."

Second Look.
 He looked into her trusting eye:
 He looked into his heart.
 And then he murmured low and shy,
 "We two must never part."
 And then he took another look
 And saw what was to pay;
 He looked into his pocketbook
 And made his getaway.

Wasn't Looking.
 "He has seen better days."
 "You mean he had a chance to."
 "No; he was once worth money."
 "I know, but then he thought days were made for sleeping."

Probably Not.
 "I am a modest man."
 "Are you?"
 "Yes. There is only one place where I expect to be of importance, and I know I shall not enjoy it."
 "Where is that?"
 "At my funeral."

Basis of Congeniality.
 "You girls seem to be great friends."
 "Lucy and I? Yes, we are."
 "How does it come?"
 "She uses the same brand of powder that I do."

A Nuisance.
 How thoroughly you hate the man who tells you what to do
 When you are doing all you can:
 A little extra too.
 When you are weary, faint and sore
 And well nigh in a daze
 He asks you if you've tried the thing
 You've tried in forty ways.

Perhaps you're working with a lock
 Whose spring is out of whack.
 It lets the bolt go up in place,
 But will not draw it back,
 You tug and twist and pound and swear
 And mash your pretty thumb.
 He looks at it and says, "Perhaps
 That spring is out of plumb."

He tells you how to break the colt
 When you are in a stew
 And out of temper and of breath
 And almost black and blue.
 You try to fix the motorboat;
 That is your special pet.
 He tells you how in all wise tones
 The engine should be set.

He sticks his nose in everything.
 Advice he has on tap
 And running like a swollen brook
 Until you want to scarp.
 You know it is against the law
 A man like that to slay.
 You'd hate to do it—yes, indeed—
 But still some time you may.

HOW TO USE COCONUTS.

There Are Various Delicious Ways of Serving Them.

The sight of the big brown coconuts in the fruit stalls recalls many delightful ways of using them. Although the desiccated kind sold in packages has its uses, it is often sold when stale, and one cannot be as sure of it as of the fresh nut.

When selecting a coconut choose one in which the "milk" can be heard when it is shaken. Punch open the small spots at the end of the nut to let out this liquid and then break it open with a hammer. The thin rind after breaking the shell away from the meat can be peeled off neatly with a French cook's knife.

A coconut can be grated in quantity at home and dried with sugar. It will keep fresh a long time and will not lose its delicate flavor. Grate the white meat on a platter and sprinkle with the sugar. Place it in the oven with the door open so that it will dry slowly. The heating closet under the oven has been used in this way to advantage. The smallest cutter of the meat grinder may sometimes be used instead of the grater, and if it can it will save much time and patience. Some choppers cut the coconut into tiny lumps, which are not attractive. About one cupful and a half of grated coconut can be obtained from one nut rather under medium size. Fresh coconut grated in this way is also nice if slightly browned, but if a gas range is being used care must be taken not to place the coconut too near the flames, as it catches fire easily. Custards, bonbons and other sweets are improved by a sprinkling of this browned coconut.

Grated coconut may take the place of meringue on a pie, and some palates will like it better. A few flakes should be folded through the filling, and the covering should be delicately browned. Apple tarts treated in this way are very attractive. Fill the baked shells of puff paste with apple sauce, sprinkle liberally with snowy coconut and put the tarts into the oven for five or ten minutes or until the filling has thickened and the coconut is a delicate brown.

Fresh grated coconut may be used to advantage with strawberries in various desserts and other sweets. A coconut blancmange, for example, is delicious if each plateful is served with a large spoonful of very ripe mellow berries.

No two flavorings combine so well as orange and coconut. Sliced sweet oranges are often sprinkled with coconut and served as a dessert for a supper. Sliced bananas may be served in place of the sliced oranges and covered with a snowy coating of sweetened whipped cream and sprinkled with a little fresh coconut. For a tutti frutti put sliced oranges and bananas in layers, sprinkling between with sugar and grated coconut and arranging over the top a decoration of maraschino cherries or very ripe strawberries rolled in powdered sugar.

Certainly Not.
 "I have a good opinion of myself, but I am not egotistical."
 "No?"
 "Not at all. I would be, though, to have such a good opinion of my own abilities if I were like the common run of people."
 "Like them?"
 "Yes—stupid, you know."

 On thy cold gray stones, O sea!
 And I would that my tongue could utter
 The thoughts that arise in me.

OH, well for the fisherman's boy
 That he shouts with his sister at play!
 Oh, well for the sailor lad
 That he sings in his boat on the bay!

AND the stately ships go on
 To their haven under the hill;
 But, oh, for the touch of a vanished hand
 And the sound of a voice that is still!

BREAK, break, break
 At the foot of thy crags, O sea!
 But the tender grace of a day that is dead
 Will never come back to me.
 —Tennyson.

BALD HEADS NOT WANTED

Baldness is too Generally Considered a Sign of Advanced Age

A bald headed person does not have an equal chance with one blessed with a healthy head of hair, because baldness is too generally accepted as an indication of age. Many large corporations have established an age limit, and refuse to take men over 35 years of age as new employees.

Probably 65 per cent of bald-headed people may regain a good head of healthy hair if they will follow our advice and accept our offer. We have a remedy that we positively guarantee to grow hair on any head, unless the roots of the hair are entirely dead, their follicles closed, and the scalp has become glazed and shiny. We want people to try this remedy at our risk, with the distinct understanding that unless it does exactly what we claim it will, and gives satisfaction in every respect, we shall make no charge for the remedy used during the trial.

We know exactly what we are talking about, and with this offer back of our statements no one should scoff, doubt our word, or hesitate put our remedy to an actual test.

We want every one in Marshfield who is suffering from any scalp or hair trouble, dandruff, falling hair, or baldness to try our Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We want them to use it regularly—say until three bottles have been used—and if it does not eradicate dandruff, cleanse and refresh the scalp, tighten the hair in its roots, and grow new hair, we will return every cent paid us for the remedy for the mere asking. There is no formality expected, and we exact no obligation from the user whatever.

We are established right here in Marshfield, and make this offer with a full understanding that our business success entirely depends upon the sort of treatment we accord our customers, and we would not dare make the above offer unless we were positively certain that we could substantiate it in every particular. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at Lockhart-Parsons Drug Co., "The Busk Corner."
