WOMAN'S INFLUENCE.

Why shouldn't a woman who makes her own living have a voice in making the laws which govern her? I believe in women. They are human beings, and I believe they should have the rights of human beings. Men make laws that will take the life of a woman, and why shouldn't women have a say as to who shall administer those laws? There are more educated women than men. Men sometimes fancy that they know more than women, and they do about some things. And women know more than men about other things. Women are more moral than men. They have taught men all the manners and morals that they know. If it were not for women I believe that men would be barbarians.—Senator Owen.

TEARS THAT SWEETEN WOE.

THERE is nothing in love or song To match the tears that sweeten woe; Not gems that deck the ornate throng

May meetly unto them belong. But what the sage knows not, they know.

Not charmed vision of romance That rises like a god afar; Yes, like a god of fiery glance Who comes with golden sword and lance Returning from a Titan war.

Not a still nook in nature's breast Wherein the dreamer tily dreams And where the soft leaves droop in rest At evening's delicate behest Wrapped in a mantle of moonbeams.

And not the dark, wind haunted sea And not the stern and rugged hills, The mist that follows eerily, The moonlit groves of witchery, The babble of the forest rills.

Nay, poet, seek not in your heart Nor in the loved one's eyes—in vain Are all the fantasies of art From them the mysteries depart To wait upon the tears of pain.

Lone is the road they take and long. Gently they come and gently go, Far from the mart, far from the throng, Far from desire, far from song, The perfect tears that sweeten woe. —R. T. Chandler in Westminster Gazette.

Some persons always act as if they were engaged in conserving their common sense.

There are people who can't even imitate a good thing.

The most charming thing about the future is its uncertainty.

Don't wait for some one to give you a chance. Go ahead and take one.

You may not be a world beater, but you can do your best to beat the band.

Sometimes opportunity merely whistles in the street as it goes by.

It's easier for some men to work than to play—if they are well paid for it.

When hospitality is in the latchstring is out.

Luck is never enamored deeply of timidity.

What has become of the old fashioned woman who raised her bread with dried yeast?

Don't seem to have too much influence with yourself or the court may appoint a guardian for you.

The Trusted Official. "I hear that there is a cloud over Jones in the matter of that trust fund."

"Oh, well, I guess the cloud was gold filed for him."

Hard to Live With. "She always wears such a distressed look."

"Yes; her husband is one of those persons who never do anything wrong."

Her View. "Men should be kept in their place."

"Well, what is their place?"

"Second."

Have your calling cards printed at The Times' office.

TONGUE COUPLETS.

"THE boneless tongue, so small and weak, Can crush and kill," declared the Greek.

"THE tongue destroys a greater horde," The Turk asserts, "than does the sword."

THE Persian proverb wisely saith, "A lengthy tongue—an early death."

OR sometimes takes this form instead: "Don't let your tongue cut off your head."

"THE tongue can speak a word whose speed," Says the Chinese, "outstrips the steed."

WHILE Arab sages this impart: "The tongue's great storehouse is the heart."

FROM Hebrew wit the maxim sprung, "Though feet should slip, ne'er let the tongue."

THE sacred writer crowns the whole—"Who keeps the tongue doth keep his soul."

—Spurgeon.

SOME persons seem to grow young all the time, but they can't keep their birthdays from paying them annual visits.

The girl who cans the fruit for her mother sometimes finds it hard to can the young men.

Domestic difficulties should not be brought out for foreign consumption.

The man who has to advertise his own goodness will bear watching.

But then we aren't so much concerned in what people will say of us after we are dead.

The farmer is the only one who can consistently water the stock.

A broken word is a hard thing to mend.

Time may be money, but still most of us know a lot of old paupers.

Some people wouldn't live just to be contrary if they only knew how to manage it comfortably.

Every woman delights in a well trained husband, but none possesses one.

Had Other Duties. "Where is that waiter?" asked the impatient man.

"What waiter?" asked the guest who wasn't in a hurry.

"The one who was here three hours ago and took my order."

"Oh, that one! I presume he is out in the back yard running a race with a snail. Watch the sporting papers in the morning and you will read about it."

Extremely Nervous. "She is a very nervous person."

"Indeed?"

"Yes; she can't bear to see any motion."

"How queer?"

"Isn't it? It nearly drives her mad to see time fly."

Feminine. She gave a most decided "No, And then she murmured "Yes," For that small girl could change her mind, As she might change her dress.

Some Run. "Who was Washington? Did he ever run an aeroplane?"

"No."

"Did he ever run a motorboat or an automobile?"

"No, but he ran the British."

Her Next Move. "Let me see," mused the young wife as she poked up the cookbook, "I have mixed the batter for the angel cake. Now what do I do next?"

"Telephone for the doctor," answered the heartless husband, who happened along in time to overhear her.

A Monster Bird. Freddie—Ma, the bat is the biggest bird that flies, ain't it?

Ma—By no means, Freddie.

Freddie—Well, anyway some of 'em must be mighty big, cause I heard father say that he was out on one last night.

LOST TIME. Lost yesterday, somewhere between sunrise and sunset, two golden hours, each with sixty diamond minutes. No reward is offered, for they are gone forever.—Horace Mann.
