WITH TOAST AND TEA

PARODY ON THE VILLAGE BLACKSATH.
 (The man who submitted this is afraid to sign his name.)
 Within his corner store-room bright
 The village druggist stands, With thread bared coat, receded pants,
 And thin and bony hands.
 And the bottles on his shelf are 'rayed
 With gilt and golden bands.

With hungered eye and famished look,
 He gazed toward the door,
 Looking for a liberal customer
 Who will increase the store
 Of nickels in his money drawer,
 At least one nickel more.

His hair is thin and grey and short,
 His face is pinched and wan, Thought sits enthroned upon his brow,
 He sells what'er he can,
 And stares the whole world in the face,
 For he is a hard-up man.

Week in, week out, from morn till night,
 You can see him standing there,
 You can hear him sigh his heavy sighs,
 The measure of despair,
 Lack lustre eyes and sunken form
 To tell of want and care.

The children coming home from school Drop in at the open door,
 They love to beg for almanacs
 And picture cards galore,
 And make life for that pill pounder One long, continual bore.

On Sunday he never goes to church,
 His store he must attend,
 He never hears a sermon
 Or thinks of his latter end.
 From store to meals from meals to store
 His footsteps always tend.

Toiling, rejoicing, sorrowing, Onward through life he goes,
 Each morning sees the same old friend,
 Each eve increasing woes,
 Till finally he tumbles off his perch
 And finds that last repose.

THE HOG
 (By Star Key)

Mark you, this glutton's seldom dull;
 In circumspection deep;
 He knows enough when he is full,
 To hide and go to sleep.
 The biped being acquisitive,
 With wealth enough in store, Finds little rest that sleep can give,
 While reaching out for more.
 'Tis part of the primordial plan,
 This selfish search for self,
 And being so, why blame the man That looks out for himself?
 The reason sought will show (in brief)
 It springs from the first cause—
 That it is due—being born a thief—
 To primordial laws.

While gazing on the passing show
 Use circumspection, too.
 A stream of "crooks" go to and fro;
 Still, watch yourself; and do Quell fruitless thoughts that all are blind
 Who silently do pass—
 Reap all you may, but keep in mind Cupidity is glass.

I attempted writing an essay lately that would interest the farming population, and take them by surprise, also. I got well under way but caught a snag, and fortunately, too, If I had succeeded in wading through the intricacy of the subject involved, I would not only have surprised the farmers but utterly astonished them.
 The idea to which I clung tenaciously (as a sucker to a shark) when elaborated, I intended naming "The practical use of the plow;" but as I never plowed anything but the sea, I went to sea on the subject and got lost in a labyrinth of conjecture.

In proceeding further with my efforts, I studied a variety of farm products, and finally settled on hogs.
 In dealing with the quadruped I will also touch the idiosyncrasy of the bi-ped hog.

The Hog is a good subject when fat, pickled and packed in a barrel.
 Alive, he is a busy animal, there is nothing lazy about him.

In hunger he resembles the biped; but, when his internal longing is satisfied he becomes quiescent and his resemblance to the biped (the twolegged hog) ceases.

The great trouble with the hog is that having no aristocratic notions, being always meek and lowly in his disposition, he is still inclined to enter the point of his proboscis where he has received no invitation. 'Tis a lamentable fact; nevertheless, even in that case, he is but an imitator of the superior animal.

Thus far, I have but touched the amiable disposition of the porcine quadruped and his exalted affinity As a labor-saving machine the hog would be a success but his utility is doubtful. While it is necessary to procure food he will remain faithful at his post; but, here again, his idio-syncrasy compares favorably with the biped, there may be a division of the labor but not of the profit.

There are varieties of hogs; but the base of all hogs is the biped hog.
 He is the precursor—the advance agent of all hogs. 'Tis he that opens the gate and leaves it so that the beasts of the field may run riot in the garden of the husbandman. Malice is imbedded in his heart, and greed is his chief attribute. Watch him; give him no opportunity to insert his nose in your reserve; then, he may be unable to reveal in the Satanic delight which he takes in the misfortune of others.

The political field teems with human vultures. They snarl into positions frequently for which they are totally unqualified. No interest of our progress or our aim for improvement will be subserved by following in the wake of a gang of non-producing self-seekers. It is absurd even to think of reforming principles or beneficial ideas emanating from such utterly selfish material.
