EASTER AT THE CHURCHES

AN EASTER PRAYER

Resurrect Thou the dreams and songs and love that enchanted the garden of my youth, filled with the joys of a thousand hopes, in the still morning's twilight and dawning visions, in the shadowed stary night. As the kindly earth yields forth each spring her budding brood, so in the barren winter of my heart, may there bloom again the rose of sweet content. O'er the din of the world and the strife of men, let rise the symphonies of eternal peace. Resurrect them that slumber in graves of gold and deliver humanity from those cruel conventions that are but the husks of virtue. Make kindness king, and teach us that good deeds are greater than philosophy. To tired men that daily tread the crowded streets give Thou a place of sweet repose at night and fill with love the hearts of lonely women. Bring forth sweet babes from out the arms of each, to light with joy the by-ways of the earth. Thou great God, uphold me also in the lonely hour, and though I fall in the din and dust of the world, resurrect Thou me. Even to the last turn my hands to kindly service and part my lips in gleeful songs of love, and in the softly falling dark, when all grows strangely still, may I be glad to have trod the sweet green earth and known the tender touch of love, yet may I depart with joy as one who journeys home at evening.

LEAP YEAR.
 We're up against it once again,
 The maids think they can "come it"
 All over us. They're hunting men,
 And we are one, dad gum it
 We crossed our fingers yesterday,
 Gave thanks that we were single,
 Then in our pockets thrust our hands,
 And heard some money jingle.

It is a pleasant sound to hear
 And saves a lot of trouble.
 But this is such a risky year
 It costs more to go double.
 To say "no" never is polite
 When a pretty maid is asking,
 Perhaps she has turned down the light,
 You in her smiles are basking.

If she should get down on her knees
 Some night when you are calling,
 And tell you you are her whole cheese
 How would you do your stalling?
 You couldn't anger that sweet thing,
 A wrong you wouldn't do her,
 Would you go out and buy the ring,
 Or be a brother to her?

That gentle maid you can't repulse;
 Her mother eggs her on.
 Then hurries in to learn results
 As soon as you are gone,
 Oh, Leap Year is a funny time,
 There is no need denying,
 We're up against it, one and all;
 But what's the use of crying?
