KILL BEAR NEAR BANDON

G. M. Doyle and L. W. Peare were out at the head of Twomile last week on a bear hunt, with their dogs, and the dogs treed a large bear in the den under the roots of a fallen tree. The entrance to the den was so small the men thought it was probably a wild cat den but upon investigation they found it to be a real bruin. The men used poles and poked the bear out of the hole with the dogs clinging to it, after which they got two shots into her and brought her down. After this they went into the den and found two little whimpering cubs, which they took to Doyle's where they are growing "fat and sassy" on cow's milk.—Bandon Recorder.

NEXT SUNDAY MOTHERS' DAY

May 12 Is Date Set Aside for General Tribute to Her Or Her Memory.

Mother's day conceived in 1908 will be observed May 12. The originator of the plan was Miss Anna Jarvis, 2031 North Twelfth Street, Philadelphia, who commemorated the anniversary of her mother's death by wearing a white flower. She wrote a letter describing her idea to a Philadelphia paper and it was the beginning of "Mother's Day."

Miss Jarvis suggested the white carnation for mothers who are dead, and the bright flower for those who are alive. The attributes of the carnation, standing for purity, beauty, and love, appealed to her. She says: "A small bouquet of flowers placed near mother's picture would many times during the day bring to mind the acts of love so faithfully performed, the comforting word in the time of trouble together with a helping hand extended to all who might come her way. Let the memory of your mother live in your heart one day of the year at least, and lift you from the petty trials of life as she willingly would do if she were here with you, and if mother still blesses your home wear a bright flower suggestive of her life of active love."

The following was written by an invalid mother, Mrs. Nora Armstrong, of Portland, which may appeal to many other mothers: I saw a crown descending, For some saint or holy one, I thought; for the jewels in that crown Shone brighter than the sun. And I asked the Angels bearing it Who was so holy and good As to win such a crown As they brought down. And they answered, "'Tis Motherhood."

As they meekly bowed before me, And laid it at my feet, And said in accents soft and low Like silver bells so sweet, That all through countless ages (The Angels had worked on this, To make it shine as brightly As the love in a mother's kiss; And now they are loath to bring it, Feeling they needed more time To have it reflect the glory of Motherhood divine.

ney's place for M. Sells in this territory.

MRS. LLOYD W. JACOBS and little son, James Lloyd, arrived yesterday for a few weeks visit at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Ferrey. Grandpa Ferrey says there isn't a bigger or better one year old on the Pacific coast than his young grandson. Mr. Jacobs will join his wife here later to accompany her on her return to take in the Rose Carnival and the Elks' Convention in Portland.
