Change Officers—According to reports in circulation here, Si Noah is planning to resign as deputy game warden for this section. Walter Condon is being talked of as his probable successor.

Coming This Summer—Professor Schenck, head of the Biltmore Forestry school, has written here that he and his students will be here late in July or the first of August for a two months' stay. He and Mrs. Schenck will be accompanied by their nephew.

Gas Explodes—While working on the excavation for the Terminal Railway's work on North Front street this morning, Ed Kronholm narrowly escaped a bad gas burn. His pick struck a rock and the spark from it ignited a pocket of gas from a leak. Flame shot out for several feet and caused the workmen to scramble lively. The damage caused the gas to be shut off for awhile, resulting in considerable inconvenience to gas consumers around town generally and putting The Times' linotypes out of service for several hours.

For Paving Work—The Coos Bay Paving and Construction company this morning shipped the bitumen and concrete needed for the paving work at Coquille there today. The material was received on the last Washington. Contractors Morrissey and Small will work through so that they will be ready for the additional paving in Marshfield and also for other paving which it is likely Coquille citizens will have put in. of the residents of the principal streets in Coquille are talking about paving a narrow stretch in the center of the streets and parking the balance which would greatly beautify the town.

Rain Delays Games—Owing to the rain yesterday, the Coquille team did not come over for the game at North Bend. Norway did not come over for the game at Sumner, either. The regular league season will open next Sunday.

Return Today—F. E. Wilson and John F. Hall returned from Pendleton today. They had been attending the I. O. O. F. Grand Lodge there. Mr. Wilson was appointed Deputy Grand Master for this lodge. T. J. Thrift and CHAS. Adams, of Myrtle Point, also returned today from Pendleton.

Narrow Escape—Jim Hawks lost control of a steed he was riding on Front street this afternoon. The animal ran up on the walk at the Busy Corner and threw Hawks off and for a minute it looked as though he would go crashing through the plate-glass front. However, he turned in time to avoid the accident.

Pillager Escapes—Last evening about 10:30, Merchant Patrolman Chas. Doane heard someone inside the Breakwater warehouse. He tried to gain entrance but could not and finally called Claude Stutsman, Jay Tower and Mr. Rehfield to stand guard at the doors until he could locate the agent and get a key. Night-watch Shoupe also appeared on the scene. When the agent arrived, they found the pillager had made his exit through some loose plank in the floor and got away underneath the wharf. He got in the same way. He could not be located although diligent search was made. This is the second time that pillagers have gained access to the building in the same manner within a week.

WHAT A MUSIC PUPIL NEEDS

Prof. Richards Explains Some of the Essentials in the Study of Piano—New Plans for New Class Now Starting.

"There have been many ideas expressed and many theories advanced by teachers of music," says Prof. Richards, who is organizing his summer class for the study of piano, "whereby the greatest good may be accomplished and the most rapid advancement made by pupils of piano. That the best results be secured, however, it is conceded by all that a formulated system must be followed by teacher and student alike, and during my 12 years' experience in New York City I have found a number of fundamental ideas that, if followed, will prove highly beneficial toward attaining the objective—the perfecting of the student in this particular line. Some of the ideas are these:

"Too much stress cannot be placed on the value of the authority of the teacher and obedience on the part of the pupil. Just as this is true in other branches of teaching, just so it is true, and doubly so, in music, and is one of the fundamentals governing a successful teacher, as well as being conducive to rapid advancement on the part of the pupil.

"Next in importance is that of concentrated practice on the part of the pupil. Very few pupils practice intelligently, and may use their time at the piano with but half of the time showing results. The practice should be in absolute quietude, best in the music room with closed door, and the same hour set for study each day. Early morning is ideal, and an excellent manner to begin the day.

"In the beginning, the elementary studies, such as spelling of musical terms, pronunciation, definitions, study of clefs, of high and low treble and thorough bass notes, thorough knowledge of the keyboard, studies in signs and studies in expression, should be entered into carefully and thoroughly by the pupil, and in turn, the teacher should study the individuality of each of his pupils, seeking to discover the best manner of instilling these elementary ideas. He must impress in a convincing manner the danger of a wrong position of the hands, and must judge the length and strength of the fingers, especially fourths and fifths. A great many pupils can be found with crooked fifths, a fault dating from the beginning of their musical training, and traceable to the teacher. A bad start is expensive, as well as using the time of the pupil wrongfully.

"Scale study is one of the most necessary of fundamental ideas, on account of advancing technique, and the correction of many faults, but by reason of being distasteful to a large number of students, is one of the hardest to handle. There is no fixed method of teaching scales, but is dependent wholly upon the teacher. I have studied a most interesting way of advancing scales, presenting the interesting side rather than the monotonous to my students, and they in turn have, for the most part, fallen in readily with my idea, and the method has proved highly successful."

Prof. Richards is meeting unusual success in the organization of his class for the summer. A large number of students, not wishing to allow their work to lapse during the vacation period, have taken advantage of this opportunity to continue their studies in this manner. Prof. Richards announces that, in addition to the time allotted each pupil individually for lessons, he will reserve two hours each week, at which time he will instruct the class as a whole in technical points and the study of musical terms.

Prof. Richards has his studio in temporary quarters in the Williams building on Broadway where appointments may be made by mail or telephone by prospective pupils. Phone No. 233-J. In the fall it is his purpose to open a permanent school in larger quarters where recitals may be given.
