CORRECT PRINCIPLE.

JUDGE in Wisconsin has decided that a reporter for a newspaper cannot be required to divulge the source of information which he may wish to publish.

It is the first time that this view has been advanced by any Judge, so far as known, and it rings true, for it is in encouragement of those who seek to know and to tell the truth about affairs.

The crook dearly loves secrecy. A cloak of darkness to him is a protection which he resists giving up. And when he is able to terrorize those who have information by threatening their certain discovery and exposure if they furnish their information to agents of publicity, he is able to continue his devious way indefinitely.

The Wisconsin jurist has put a new complexion on the situation. The evil doer can no longer blackmail public spirited persons into silence about wrong doing. The decision may be the basis of wholesome disclosures at least about public affairs, doubtless, everywhere.

PUT UP JETTY LIGHTS

The poles have been set and wires strung for the jetty lights, to light the bar and inner harbor of the Coquille river. The intention is to put in 12 lights of 200 candle power each with powerful reflectors calculated to bring out all the possibilities of the lights. This will, it is thought, light the way at the bar and harbor sufficiently that vessels can enter or depart at night just as easily as in the day time. This will facilitate shipping at this harbor to a very great extent—Bandon Recorder.

Explained.

"I wonder why his head is so easily turned?"

"That is easily seen." "Perhaps you can explain it." "I can. It swings on the pivot of selfishness and is always freely lubricated with vanity and self conceit."

Kept It Dark.

"He saved a whole ship load from drowning years ago, and no great fuss was made about it."

"He is a hero of the old school." "What is the difference?" "He doesn't carry a press agent."

Length of Time.

"Do you manage to keep a domestic long?"

"Oh, no; not long." "About how long?" "Generally long enough to see how she does her hair on Sunday."

The Pessimist.

"Look pleasant!" "Look pleasant?" "Yes. It doesn't hurt you any, does it?" "Man, it is such hard work that it takes all the life out of me."

HELPED TO KEEP DOWN EXPENSES

Mrs. J. E. Henry, Akron, Mich., tells how she did so: "I was bothered with my kidneys and had to go nearly double. I tried a sample of Foley Kidney Pills and they did me so much good that I bought a bottle, and feel that they saved me a big doctor's bill." Red Cross Drug Store.

WALT MASON

THE POET PHILOSOPHER

MARCHING ON

her winter furs? The girls are marching on! "The right to vote," my sisters say, "is quite too sweet, we wist; it is a wholesome pastime that we long have sorely missed; for we have soured on crokinole and we are tired of whist!" The girls are marching on! I ask my sisters how they'd vote if they should vote today; they give the problem weighty thought, and this is what they say: "We'd note how Mrs. Jimpson votes, then vote the other way." The girls are marching on!

ARRANGE FOR BIG MEETING

BALTIMORE PROVIDES AUDITORIUM FOR NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION—EVERY CONVENIENCE PROVIDED.

(By Associated Press to The Coos Bay Times.)

BALTIMORE, June 10—The Democratic candidate for President of the United States will be nominated in a huge National Guard Armory situated in the residence portion of Baltimore. When this city sent its representatives before the Democratic National Convention here the possession of an ideal convention hall was one of the strongest advantages Baltimore had to offer. Since that time, at the expense of many thousands of dollars the hall has been made to answer every requirement of the delegates who assemble here on June 25 and the throngs that gather to watch their deliberations.

The Democratic National Convention will meet in the Fifth Regiment Armory, which occupies nearly a whole city square in the Mount Royal district, fronting on Hoffman street, and bounded by Preston street in the rear. At the two ends of the block are Park and Linden avenues, both of which carry trolley lines connecting with the business center. Two squares distant is the main station of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and only a little further, barely five minutes walk, is the Union Station, where passengers arrive on the other railroads entering the city. Close at hand, within easy walking distance, is the city's largest hotel.

When the State spent $450,000 for this drill hall to house Baltimore's famous regiment, the "Dandy Fifth," big conventions were in mind, and the building was situated and designed with reference to affording such accommodations. Exterior embellishment was a secondary consideration. The Fifth Regiment Armory is surrounded by massive walls of grey granite, two stories high, from which rise twelve steel trusses, that carry the arched roof to a height of 85 feet. It is lighted by windows in the side walls and by a skylight that runs the whole length of the apex of the roof. From the outside the appearance of the structure is not particularly impressive, probably because the principal dimensions are lateral, and too extensive for the eye to appreciate unless the beholders could look down on the building from an elevation. The armory extends 364 feet in width on Hoffman and Preston streets and is 284 feet deep. The great drill hall inside, where the convention will assemble, is 300x200 feet.

To adapt this building further to convention purposes the State appropriated $35,000. The greater part of this sum has been spent to increase the seating capacity by putting in temporary balconies at the two ends of the drill hall. Decorations, which include the construction of a false ceiling to improve the acoustic properties, cost $7,000. Several thousand dollars have been spent in the construction of the speakers' platform, on seats, and on remodeling the military company quarters at the sides and ends of the building for use as committee rooms.

As one enters the hall through the main gateway on Hoffman street the eye first is impressed by the magnificent distances and the seemingly endless vista of seats. Under the hands of the decorators the place has lost its military, utilitarian look, transformed by the more than 40,000 yards of bunting that hides the roof beams, drapes the walls and covers practically every foot of the interior except the windows and floor spaces. The background is a soft effect of cream, gold and white, which makes an effective setting for the national colors displayed in countless arrangements, and the insignia and colors of the various States.

The seating arrangements here are the result of long study on the architects' part, aided by the practical experience of men versed in the practical problems of great conventions. This hall will seat comfortably more than 15,000 persons, and those in charge of its preparations believe they have worked out their problem so that every member of this great audience can command a view of the speakers' stand and understand what is being said. To bring this about the location of the speakers' platform was the matter of first importance.

In the Baltimore hall the speakers will stand well out toward the middle of the auditorium, directly opposite the main central entrance, midway between the ends of the hall and about 60 feet, or more than one-third the distance from the rear wall of the interior. This rostrum, the heart of the convention hall, is not large enough to permit much pacing about on the orator's part. It measures about 15 feet long by ten feet deep. It is elevated six feet above the main floor.

Back of the rostrum, two feet above it and communicating by steps, is another platform of the same size for the use of secretaries of the convention. Back of this are 600 seats, banked at the rear to a height of 14 feet, which are reserved for the officers of the national organization. Grouped about the speakers' platform, at both sides and in front, are 435 seats for the press. These communicate through passages under the banked-up seats behind with the company rooms outside the drill hall which have been fitted up for the use of the newspapers and press associations and telegraph and telephone companies. From these offices, within sound of the speaker's voice and of the secretary as he announces the results of each ballot, run wires that will carry the news of the convention to the world.

In front of the platform, separated only by the narrow row of press seats and an aisle, are the places for the delegates who come to Baltimore to register the presidential choice of the party in the various States and Territories of the Union. Although the number of votes these States and Territories cast may aggregate 1,094 the architects have provided seats for 1,200 delegates, because some of the states, Maryland among them send to Baltimore twice as many delegates as they have votes, each delegate being the custodian of half a vote. Back of the delegates sit an equal number of alternates, and these 2,400 seats occupy the center of the floor between the platform and the entrance. These four blocks of seats will hold much of the life and motion of the convention. The location of the representatives of each state will be shown by an elevated sign.

Something to Judge By.

"They say he isn't very bright." "I wouldn't say that." "What is your opinion?" "Well, when he gets on a jury the lawyers are careful not to object to him."

His Only Way.

"Never been across the ocean?" "No." "You ought to take the trip." "How is the swimming?"

Squaring the Circle.

"How you coming, old man?" "Making three squares a day." "That must be what is rounding you out."

Some Exceptions.

Not every microbe you may meet is mean enough to can. The germ that flavors butter-milk is quite a friend of man. Drink neatly and you'll live, they say. To see the scuffers pass away.

The Present.

The past is gone beyond recall. Far in advance the future lies. We have the present; that is all. So let us grasp it as it flies. Enjoy it as we go along And crowd it with the things that pay. Mix in a share of mirth and song And make the most of each today.

We can but dwell upon the past, And of the future we can dream. But to the present, hard and fast, We can apply our pounds of steam And make it count as down the line It passes, leaving naught behind Save records that for years will shine Or be a millstone on the mind.

If there is anything in life Worth living it is now and here. So let us mingle in the strife And make of each a banner year. No use to think how things would hum Could we live yesterday once more Or plan for days that are to come. A brilliant and enchanted score.

This hour, this moment, is the one In which we live and move and think. Admire the rainbow or the sun, Enjoy the things we eat and drink. So fill it up, and fill it high, With words and smiles and play and act. We live it once in passing by, So let us live it for a fact.
