of the First Methodist church of Minneapolis. While studying under Mme. Behrens, Mrs. Gidley was asked to sing a lullaby by Conductor Oberhoffer of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra and the noted musician was so pleased with her interpretation of it that he later often played her accompaniments. Among the others who will assist in the program are Lew Keyzer, a violinist who recently came to the Bay and who was a pupil of Prof. Hendri Jacobson of Chicago for several years. Mrs. Wm. Horsfall, Jr., noted local pianist, and Dr. W. A. Toye, the Marshfield clarinetist.

When the sun is hot and the water blue,
And the clover nods to the breeze,
Comes the summer girl with the fetching curl
And filmy gowns and teeth of pearl,
To set male hearts in a dreadful whirl
As she lolls beneath the trees.

PLACE OF CONTENT
When I build my home, no matter where,
It may have never a room to spare,
It may be lacking in lines and style,
Its architecture may cause a smile,
But this one thing I shall require—
A wide mouthed hearth with an open fire.

What do I care if the walls be plain,
If the low roof leaks in a heavy rain,
There'll be pictures enough in the cheery glow
Of the burning wood when the lights are low,
And I can ponder my heart's desire,
And dry out the rain at my open fire.

No gas-lit humbug will suit my taste
(It reeks too much of mad world's haste),
I want a hearth where the wood-flames gleam
In flickering cheer the while I dream
And puff content on my blackened brier

And part of the dream of my heart would be Someone to sit at the fire with me,
To sit at the fire in the pleasant gloam,
Making my house in truth a home,
To these great blessings do I aspire—
The girl I love—and an open fire.

"HOSTESS' delight!"
You are probably racking your brains to know what "delight" can be! Well, in order to put you out of misery as painlessly as possible, writes Louise D. Mitchell, let me hasten to relieve the tension by saying that it is the girl who can talk!

And of course, you are going to declare that "any girl can talk!" But I am going to assure that this is not so. In fact, it is so little so that many girls in higher social circles are actually sent away to be trained how to do so properly.

Another interesting fact is that there are a great many paid "talkers", men as well as women, who are introduced into social functions in order to "make things go."
And I once knew a woman who had been a popular belle at a mountain resort for a number of seasons. She was young, winsome and clever, and, moreover, the daughter of very wealthy parents. Suddenly one of these financial calamities dropped down from the sky and scattered the riches in her family to the four winds of heaven. They were reduced to mere living expenses.

But this lovely girl had splendid stuff in her, and she rose to meet the dreadful situation with a heroine's courage. She interviewed the proprietors of the hotel at which place she had been such a charming guest, and laid before them the plan she had conceived. It was to the effect that she was to be permitted to go to the resort as usual, but as a paid entertainer. She would undertake to keep up the entertainment in or out doors, looking after the sports for the men and women and such amusement for girls or boys as the occasion required. She would play cards with the crabbed old backlogs, drink tea with the maidens of many summers, gossip with the matrons, and even flirt if necessary, with youths that might otherwise get into mischief.

Her plan was accepted immediately, and it worked like a charm. One condition she insisted upon, that the fact that she was a paid guest instead of a paying guest, should be kept a profound secret, and she had allowed the same freedom she had always maintained on previous summers.
Her naturally brilliant mind developed under the new order of things, and she became almost too popular for her own health's sake. That will and endless variety of thoughts enforced by necessity made her really a remarkable young woman. She was paid an excellent salary, for she had to dress well, but for two years she supported her father and mother in this way until her father recovered his losses sufficiently to enable them to live comfortably at least. It is pleasant to close this little sketch by adding that she married a wealthy man of high social prominence, and is one of our most brilliant social lights today.

And this leads me back to the girl who she has tact, heart and a ready flow of speech. At a small dinner, afternoon reception or evening gathering such a guest is a godsend to the hostess not altogether sure of herself. For, with quick tact and much heart such a girl can take any shy guest or "talkless" guest off the hands of the hostess, and, if at a reception, pilot her away to where another guest can be trusted to "break her into conversation," or if at a dinner try to draw such a one into conversation herself. It requires only an easy naturalness—the substitute for true friendliness—to do this. And it is not a bit stupid of yourself.
It is rather interesting to see them "thaw" out under your genial manner and to display your natural skill in this way. "To fill up gaps" in the general talk at the table is another help for your hostess. She may be distracted by an incompetent maid and a husband who is no help for her in the matter of conversation, and if you literally "throw yourself into the breach" at such critical moments with a happy turn of subject, you are going to win her everlasting gratitude, a small reputation as a charming girl, greater confidence in your own powers, and, incidentally, considerable popularity.
