

WITH TOAST AND TEA

VACATION LOCATION

We talked of Bandon-by-the-Sea and of a trip to Italy—
We thought a bit of Frisco or a South Sea Island cruise,
Considered Alleghany for a trip when it's not rainy
And raved o'er Honolulu (seen in McCormac's views).
We read pamphlets on the tropics and on big game hunting topics,
We were very much attracted by the realms of arctic snow;
We bent our heads and shoulders over heaps of travel folders
And discussed the many merits of the places we should go.

Then we priced the ship regalia for a Journey to Australia,
And we thought a lot of Portland and of Mexico the while,
And we talked ourselves quite silly over Argentine and Chile,
And we planned a lovely voyage to the valley of the Nile,
But we couldn't get together on the wherefore or the whether;
Each Journey we considered had the maximum of charm,
So we couldn't fix on any (for we didn't have a penny),
And we'll spend our brief vacation up Coos River on a farm.

downstairs wearing the same clothes she had on during the day.

GOOD EVENING
◆ The brave man is not he who feels no fear,
◆ For that were stupid and irrational;
◆ But he whose noble soul its fear subdues,
◆ And bravely dares the danger nature shrinks from.
—Ballile.

The girl who can pound a tennis ball all over the court sometimes raises Cain if she is called upon to pound a steak.

Hope springs eternal in the human breast but the springs under this railway hope are getting a trifle worn.

THE OLD SONG
Passed a sod-house yesterday
As I rode 'round Custer way,
An' I heern a woman sing
Sweet as birds in early spring.

The woman who is nursing a sick husband thinks she is doing her duty when she wakes him up to rearrange his pillow.

Nothin' fancy 'bout the song,
That she sang as I went 'long,
But it kind o' touched my heart—
Almos' made the tear drops start.

The woman who is a clever house-keeper needn't care what other women think about her. She has the admiration of all the men.

Hadn't heern that song before
Sence I left my father's door,
Where my old folks used to stand
Singin' that old "Beulah Land."

The numerousness of divorce cases these days is not caused altogether by unhappiness, but by the ability of husbands to pay alimony.

While she sang, I seemed to see
All the old things, dear to me,
Seen the old-time boyhood days
Thro' the years o' mist and haze.

It is all right for a girl to pose as a beauty, but she should pose at the proper places, one of which is among the dirty dishes of the dinner table.

Then I thought of mother's prayer,
As she kneeled beside her chair,
Tollin' Him as lives above,
How she's thankful for His love.

O don't you remember about one Ben Bolt?
'Twas long years ago that he swayed;
But there is a later: T. Roosevelt Bolt
Which puts one Ben Bolt in the shade.

Kind o' think that good old song,
Never done nobody wrong,
Seems to sort o' take your hand,
Leadin' you to "Beulah Land."
—BOB STANLEY.

OH, MERCY ME! CUT OUT THE "GRIZZLY" GIRLS OR YOU'LL LEARN TO LIKE HUGGING.
Now, you girls who think you'd like to engage in that grizzly bear dance proceedings, you just stop, read, and ponder awhile.

A woman's brainstorm is always followed by a heavy rain of tears.

Do you want a harrassed look, a lumbering walk, hands dropping like paws, rapid growth of finger nails, abnormal development of the muscles of the legs, a savage temper, a growling voice, sleepiness in the winter time and —please listen to this—and a fondness for hugging?

The only time a bore is not a bore is when he talks to us about ourselves.

Well, if you do, go ahead and do the "grizzly," but don't say that Chas. H. Teple of Johnston, Pa., and president of the International Dancing Masters' association didn't do his best to warn you.

All men are equal as long as they can keep from under a woman's thumb.

He says that girls who dance the "grizzly" will turn into semi-bears. And its bad on the fellows as well: it makes them like the hugging business, too.

Once in a great while a man acquires wealth and fame without forgetting his old friends.

It won't be so long ere the song of the sea,
And the sunshine that glistens so bright and so free,
Will tempt us to wander once more
Where the summer hotels are so thick and so tall
That the view you can buy is exceedingly small
Of the waves as they break on the shore.

"Yes," said a sad-faced woman,
"I know there is such a thing as a personal devil, for I married him."

But each year we assemble and faithfully try
To obtain all the pleasures our purses can buy;
And we figure by day and by night
On a debt whose small items will hourly increase
Where freckles are twenty-five dollars apiece
And mosquitos cost ten cents a bite.

JINGLING JOSHES

Old Deacon Bright bent down in prayer,
And then, without a warning,
He stepped upon a peeling there—
O what a lovely morning!

Bill Ball came home one afternoon:
Of course 'twas much too soon for Ball;
He saw his wife and someone spoon—
Oh what a pretty fu-ner-al!

A small boy smoked a cheap cigar
Down where the little lamkins play
Then, suddenly, he saw a star—
What time is the parade today?

A fat girl frolicked on the beach,
Her bathing suit was much too tight,
A shell was almost in her reach—
How bright the moonbeams seem tonight!

STORY OF THE DAY

Saved! Saved at Last!
James L. King of Topeka says that while coming through Wyoming a number of the Bills crew exceedingly feverish and they pined for something damp to absorb. The train finally reached a little tumble down town and all of the Elks piled off. They tackled the first man they met. "Where," they inquired, "can we get a drink?"

The native turned slowly and spat on the new painted Pullman. Then he loo'ed the men over carefully and pointed to a millinery store across the street.
"See that li' shop?" he asked slowly.

"Yes, yes," the men waited breathlessly. "Can we get it there?"
"Nope," said the native. "That's the only place yuh can't get it."

NOT EVEN A FIG LEAF
(From London Opinion)
She grew tired of boots and made up her mind to wear nothing but shoes.

FEMINE PHILOSOPHY.
Men often wonder why it is that a girl will spend an hour or so in the evening dressing, and then come

THEN MA GOT MAD
Ma—Bollid cow's milk is not good for babies.
Pa—Sure not; a raw cow always gives better milk than a bollid cow does.

Sing a song of berry time
Swat! Doggone those flies!
In the sugar everywhere—
Biff Another dies!
Mother's in the pantry—
Bang! I've finished him,
Sister's in the kitchen—
Smash! How those flies skim.
Father's in the parlor,
Swish around his pate,
Until he's quite neevish—
Still they incubate.
Whack! A dozen dozen
Fall beneath his blows
Still the pesky vermin
Thrive and increase woes.
When the fruit is opened,
The flies are in the juice!
Don't they beat the dickens?
Don't they beat the deuce?

"COMING EVENTS CAST THEIR SHADOWS"

It seems like "flat iron" to say so, because there are no "shadows" in the laundry work we turn out. It is painstaking and careful work in every detail. "The hand that runs the iron is the hand that spoils the shirt" as often as not. The Steam Laundry is the thing, and ours is the best of the steam laundries in equipment, good work, quick deliveries and low prices.
