THE SHRINER CANDIDATE.

Ma, I'm doin' somthin' awful and my heart is 'most like lead. I've agreed to line the Shriners, and my soul is filled with dread. I'm a-goin' 'crost a desert where the sands is burnin' hot,—where there's fierce, man-eatin' camels—where they bite you in a pot. Yes, I'm goin' through a kingdom where they leave all hope behind, and the other fellers tell me that I've got to go it blind. I'm goin' through in darkness with a hoodwink on my eyes. Maybe ne'er again I'll see you, nor the earth, nor home, nor skies. I'm a-goin' in a country that is long, and deep, and wide—where some others, so they tell me, have laid down to rest, and—DIE!
 Some have crost that awful desert but they got back blind, and lame—Somegot back with hair all missin' but they got back jist the same.
 Dearest Ma, I've got to leave you. Please take care o' all my track for my only hope o' livin's based on keepin' up my luck. Wish I didn't have to journey where them Turas and A-rabs live. I would go and hide this evenin' but them fellers won't forgive. I will go and try, my darlin', to be bravest of the brave, but if I should fall in crossin', please plant posies on my grave.
 BOB STANLEY.

IMPROVING THE RIVER

Piling to be Driven to Protect Banks of Coquille.

To protect some of the land along the Coquille river is the purpose of a plan to be followed out. The Myrtle Point Enterprise says:
 "The county court has let a contract for driving 500 piles along the lower Coquille, between the county seat and Beaver slough, the purpose being to protect the banks from washing and caving. This work of the winter freshets is not only damaging to the farms and roadways along the stream but the washings fill in the river channel, producing shoals that are disadvantageous from the navigable standpoint of the river. It is found that with piles driven at intervals and backed with brush and logs, the washing away of the embankments at the sharp curves of the river is almost entirely eliminated. Along this upper portion of the river there are several bad bends that could be treated similarly with profit to the property owners and navigators."

EXPLAINS THIS YEAR'S RULES

P. M. Hall-Lewis Tells What Coos County Apple Growers Must Do.

Editor Times:—
 The threatened shortage of the local apple crop, has caused a flood of inquiries to pour into the Fruit Inspector's office, asking if it will be possible to sell fruit that while admittedly diseased, has been disinfected and thereby purged of its infectious nature. First let me repeat that it is the purpose of the Horticultural quarantine service to suppress the diseases of fruit. It is a question whether or no fruit originally diseased which has been purged thereof, comes within the purview of the law. To constitute a public nuisance, there must exist danger of spread of disease. The law gives the Board of Horticulture the power to beautify their places. The consists.

I am of the opinion that fruit which has been purged as above, is not a public nuisance, and until reviewed by my superior officers shall pass local fruit so treated, provided the fruit is sold in a package upon which has been plainly marked the name and post office address of the grower and packer, or his registered shipping mark, together with a conspicuous label or marking stating that the fruit contained in the package has been immersed in a one degree lime-sulphur solution for at least four minutes. Last season certain growers sold apples which had been merely sprayed in a pile or bin, which was obviously an evasion of the regulations. I may have erred on the side of leniency last season in these matters, but I hope to avoid the claim of discrimination this year by fixing the rule that doubtful fruit must ALL be treated as above. The fact that trees have produced diseased fruit after having been sprayed, simply indicates that the spraying was insufficient, and the mere fact that the grower did spray does not absolve him from the operation of the law concerning the fruit.

In spite of adverse opinion rather freely expressed, I am a firm believer in the future of Coos county as a fruit raising section, and hope to assist the destiny by making the production of diseased fruit through the maintenance of diseased trees so unprofitable that the grower will find the lines of least resistance lie in cleaning up the orchard, AND KEEPING IT CLEAN.
