NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Boston won the first game of the world's series this afternoon. Forty thousand persons saw the pitchers' battle in which Joe Wood of Boston turned back the Giants from the plate time and again, by clever box work. The Giants were first to take the lead on sharp hitting by second baseman Doyle and right-fielder Murray, whose bats featured in scoring the two runs for the Giants in the third. Torreau, the Giants' pitcher, held Boston hitless until the sixth inning when Centerfielder Speaker's triple and an infield hit gave the Red Sox their first run. A succession of safe hits by Boston netted three runs in the seventh. The Giants rallied gamely to the ninth, but were only able to score one run on three hits.

Umpire Egan went behind the bat, Evans took the bases, Rigler went into right field and Umpire O'Loughlin went to left field.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 8.—"Heinie" Heitmuller, right fielder of the Los Angeles Pacific Coast league team, died in a hospital here today of typhoid fever.

The above brief Associated Press dispatch to The Times will cause many a pang of genuine sorrow to the baseball fans and many friends who were not fans on Coos Bay. Wm. H. Heitmuller, better known to his friends as "Heinie," was well known and none knew him but to love him. Jack Flanagan was one of his best friends here, and received a letter from him only the other day. Jack was manager of the North Bend baseball team about 1906, when he brought Heitmuller as pitcher and fielder. Heitmuller also attended school with Arthur McKeown at Berkeley and was a pitcher on the Berkeley nine. From the North Bend club he went to the Oakland team of the Pacific Coast league and from there to the Philadelphia Nationals. Things were not agreeable to him in the east and he returned and was playing this season with the Los Angeles club of the Pacific Coast league.

SAYS HARRIMAN GAVE TO FUND MONTENEGRO HAS DECLARED WAR WITH TURKISH EMPIRE

Wayne McVeagh Tells About Railway Man Contributing to Roosevelt Campaign.

(By Associated Press to The Coos Bay Times)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Wayne McVeagh of Philadelphia, former attorney general, testified before the Clapp committee today that he did not recall an alleged conversation between J. P. Morgan and E. H. Harriman in 1904 about the Republican campaign funds. Charles Edward Russell, Socialist candidate for governor of New York, and J. C. Welliver, a writer, told their versions of the story yesterday. Substantially McVeagh had been present in Morgan's office when such a conversation took place. McVeagh said he did not wish to say he had not given Welliver some basis for a story. "I may have called on Morgan the day I have in mind, said McVeagh, "but I remember calling on H. M. Twombly at his office in the latter part of October, 1904. While we were in conversation he was called on the phone. His office is in the same building as Morgan's, but in an upper story. When Twombly returned he told me he was talking with Harriman and that Harriman had been called from Washington by Roosevelt and had found the president anxious of raising an additional fund for the campaign and that it had resulted in Harriman agreeing to raise and give Bliss $240,000. Twombly said that Harriman had called him up and said he expected him to give $50,000. Twombly told me Harriman was going to give $50,000 and that something he said led him to believe Morgan was to give $50,000. "He said that, of course, Harriman was acting in the common interest and that the contributions would have to be made. I recall he expressed an opinion that the contributions would practically be a waste, and that Roosevelt was sure of his election but that Harriman, acting for common interest, could not be expected to stand the entire contribution." He added, "of course, there is nothing for me to do but meet his request." McVeagh said that undoubtedly that was the incident to which Russell and Welliver had alluded. WANTED MORE MONEY. McVeagh also related a recent conversation with Charles A. Peabody, president of the Mutual Life Insurance company, in which Peabody said he was in Harriman's office when he (Harriman) called up Twombly about a contribution. Peabody said Harriman told him he was down at Washington and the President insisted or requested or desired him to raise additional money, part for the state campaign in New York and part to use in other states. McVeagh added that Twombly told him he had once been invited to lunch at the White House with Frick but that was before the Harriman incident. "White did not say so but he gave me to understand that they had both made contributions afterwards," said McVeagh. McVeagh had objected to relating the incidents because the men concerned were dead and unable to testify but the committee insisted Twombly represented, the witness understood, the Vanderbilt interests. Frick represented the coal steel interests, Achbold and Rogers the Standard Oil and George J. Gould, the leading railroad interests.

not be expected to stand the entire contribution." He added, "of course, there is nothing for me to do but meet his request."

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 8.—Representative William B. McKinley, prevention manager of Taft, presented to the Clapp committee today accounts showing that he had spent about $290,000 for the president's candidacy. He said $150,000 was subscribed by Henry P. Taft and Charles P. Taft, the president's brothers, and John Hay Hammond, E. T. Stotesbury and Andrew Carnegie gave $25,000. Ormsby McHenry, contest manager for the Roosevelt forces at the Chicago convention, told the committee he had spent between $25,000 and $30,000 for convention work for Roosevelt in the southern states.
