ROOSEVELT WILL DEPART MONDAY

Condition Is Much Better and He Will Rest at Oyster Bay, It Is Expected.

(By Associated Press to The Cooos Bay Times.)

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—Col. Roosevelt awoke today greatly refreshed after a good night's sleep and the doctor's examination showed the Colonel to be in splendid condition. The Colonel now suffers no pain because of the pressure of the bullet against the fractured rib. The rib itself, it is believed, is mending rapidly. When he awoke the Colonel wondered whether the attending doctors would decide to remove the bullet. He said if it was extracted he would have it glued and made into a pocket piece. All indications point to the conclusion that the wound is healing normally and that the bullet gradually is being enclosed by a new growth of tissue.

regarded as doubtful by the physicians. Receives Johnson. CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—Governor Hiram Johnson of California, nominee for vice president on the Progressive ticket, had a long conference with Colonel Roosevelt today. Will Leave Monday.

Roosevelt leaves Chicago for Oyster Bay Monday or Tuesday of next week and travels on the slower trains entering New York at the station from which trains to Oyster Bay depart. This arrangement, however, depends upon the condition of Roosevelt.

Must Have Rest. Roosevelt was allowed to sit in a chair for an hour this morning. He said it rested him greatly. Although Roosevelt insists that he is in condition to re-enter the campaign his physicians say he must have absolute quiet after he reaches Oyster Bay. While the Colonel will be permitted to consult with Progressive leaders, it probably will be decided unsafe for him to take the stump again before election day. The Colonel hopes to make at least one speech, however, in fulfillment of his promise to appear at the Madison Square Garden, in New York.

MONTENEGRO TAKES TOWN OF BERNA FROM THE TURKS

LIFE SAVERS ARE INJURED

Captain Nelson, Formerly of Cooos Bay, is Victim of Accident.

Captain Nelson, formerly in charge of the Cooos Bay life saving station, and now at Golden Gate, was a victim of an accident, together with three of his crew. The following account of the accident appeared in the San Francisco Bulletin: Captain Nelson of the Golden Gate life saving station, and three members of his crew were injured this afternoon, when their craft, which they had just put to sea in a practice exhibition, capsized. Despite the herculean efforts of the life savers to right the craft the heavy breakers pounding on the beach at the time defeated their plans. All of the crew were tossed into the surf, and it was only after a battle which lasted nearly fifteen minutes that the crew was rescued from drowning. Lines thrown from the hundreds of sightseers who thronged the beach effected the rescue of the seamen. Captain Nelson suffered more from immersion than his comrades and it is feared that his condition is serious. The men were some distance from shore when their boat was capsized for the first time. A very heavy sea was running. After struggling in the swells for some time the captain and three men who composed the crew, managed to regain the craft and right it, though it still contained much water. They had no opportunity to recover from the fatigue of this experience before the lifeboat overturned again. This time it was immediately swept beyond their reach, and, after struggling as long as they could to reach it, the men, one by one, gave up their efforts, exhausted, and were swept to and fro in the surf. The breakers finally rolled the captain and crew to shore in an unconscious condition. They were hauled upon the beach by other members of the life saving station's equipment, who endeavored to restore them to consciousness. A hurry call for medical aid was sent to the Richmond police station, there being no doctors in the vicinity. Sergeant Morman responded by having out the auto patrol and speeding to the French hospital. He secured Drs. Roy H. Morris and Adolph Berg, and returned with all speed to the beach. The men were brought under cover and given medical aid. They recovered slowly, the captain exhibiting most strongly the effects of the exposure.

The husband turned the ticket over to the wife and went on some errand, but he met a friend and got drunk. The wife was in much distress and did not know what to do. She did not want to start out and leave her husband behind, and did not want to miss the boat. An effort was made to find the husband.
