EVENING STORIES AND TALES FOR THE LITTLE PEOPLE

(All Rights Reserved)

GETTING EVEN.

The next day Bertha told Lucille that her mother had consented to her having the party, but that she did not approve of her slighting Gertrude; "but I'm going to leave her out just the same to get even with her," she said.

The party was a grand success and every boy and girl was there except Gertrude, who spent the whole evening crying because she had been slighted.

The next day after the party Bertha's mother was taking some papers out of her husband's coat pocket preparing it to send to the cleaners when she came across an envelope addressed to Bertha.

"Here's a letter that your papa has forgotten to give you," she said to her daughter. Opening the letter Bertha found it was an invitation to Gertrude's slumber party that had been sent three weeks ago.

"Now this does make a pretty mess of things," said she. "Oh, what shall I do? I am simply miserable. I do not want to tell Gertrude that I was trying to get even for then she will know what kind of a girl I really am. Isn't it too bad to have to be ashamed of one's self? Oh, why was papa so forgetful?"

"I have told you so many times, Bertha," said her mother, "that spite work and trying to get even does not pay. It is always better to return good for evil but in this case you have returned evil for good."

"I am glad that this is Saturday so that I will not have to meet Gertrude until I have had time to think things over and get up the courage to apologize to her," Bertha said.

When Bertha's mother told her father about the affair he said, "I started this tangle so you leave the straightening out to me."

On Monday Gertrude came up to Bertha and said: "Bertha, you must forgive me for not coming to your party, but papa gave me my invitation this morning, three days too late. I might have known that you weren't that kind of a girl, too. Papa is so absent minded, it seems. I guess his mind is too full of business to think about such things as parties."

She would not have thought this if she had heard the two men planning to straighten out the tangle the night before.

Bertha was surprised and oh, so ashamed. "Well, Gertrude, let's shake and call it even," she said. "for that's the very reason I didn't come to your slumber party. Isn't it terrible to have fathers who forget?"

Bertha did not ask what had happened to straighten out affairs for she was too glad to drop the subject.

THE BOBBLED PARTY.

The next Saturday, as soon as dinner was over, Uncle Henry began to get ready for the bobbed ride which he had promised Willie and his friends the week before.

"Now, William," said he, "while I put the harness on old Fan and Nell, you fill the bottom of the sled with straw, and then run in and tell Aunt Susan to give you two old comforts so you little fellows will be warm while we are riding."

"Don't forget to put the sleigh bells on, Uncle, for that's half the fun. My, but they sound pretty."

"You leave that to me, Willie," said Uncle. "I am going to show you youngsters the time of your lives. This day will be a merry one for you all, so run along, now, and bring the comforts."

Each boy and girl was ready and waiting, and soon there were eight boys and girls in the bobbed bundled up so snugly that you could scarcely see them.

They did certainly have a great deal of fun. After they had ridden for two hours, Uncle Henry took them home with him, where Aunt Susan had eight plates spread for eight hungry children. O, how good everything tasted.

After they had eaten, they played many different games in the big living room, and then sat around the great fireplace telling stories.

"Oh, please don't tell any stories about witches or hobgoblins," said Lucy Brown, "because they make me afraid when it is dark, and then sometimes I dream."

Jimmy Blake told how their big yellow dog went into the water after his baby sister and saved her from drowning. His sister told about a pet squirrel they used to have. Ena Gulm told how a mad little puppy tore up her best Sunday hat. My, how pleasant everything was around that old fireplace.

After the story-telling was over kind Aunt Susan brought in popcorn balls and candy she had made and then Uncle Henry took the boys and girls home.

"Say, Auntie," said Bobbie, "this sure has been a treat to me."

ening service. Everyone is cordially invited to come and bring a friend.

WHY

Congressman W. C. Hawley Should Be Re-Elected to Congress. Because in point of ability, experience and qualifications no opposing candidate can favorably compare with him. Because of large abilities and efficiency is added his known honesty, manhood and a character without a blemish. Because born in Oregon he knows her needs and has already secured millions of dollars for public improvements in the First District. Because he travels thousands of miles over his district annually conferring with his constituents and learning their needs. Because it has been proven that he is industrious, able, efficient, and successful in serving all the people and not a favored few. Because he has been a faithful public servant, working up to a position of influence in national affairs, so that Presidents Taft and Roosevelt, his associates of all parties and constituents generally, praise him in terms similar to those used by Governor West, after a visit to the national capital, when he said in an interview: "In intellect, oratorical ability and devotion to the interests of the people, Hawley stands head and shoulders above the great majority of the members of the National House of Representatives." (Paid Adv. Congressional Committee, 1st District.)

Mayor James C. Dahlgren is serving his fourth term as mayor of Omaha, Neb., having received the overwhelming support of the voters of that city. His steadily increasing popularity parallels that of a famous medicine he has used of which he writes: "I have taken Foley Kidney Pills and they have given me a great deal of relief, so I cheerfully recommend them." For sale by Lockhart-Parsons Drug Co., the Busy Corney.
