The record for voting was set by one man in South Marshfield. Judges say that this particular man spent just one hour and thirty minutes in the booth marking his ticket. From appearances he took all over very carefully and he was less than satisfied with his work when he came out and turned in his ballot.

The judges said that it seemed the voter had not previously considered the questions to be voted on and they noticed that he did carry with him a marked sample lot or a memorandum of the names he wanted to vote for.
