PERNHARDT'S FORMULA.

EGGS and shrimps" is the latest formula which Bernhardt has given for her wonderful vitality. An ingenious statistician has disclosed the following computation of her numerous death scenes, supposedly the most trying sort of histrionic labor:

Her deaths by self-administered poison, it was calculated, totalled well over 10,000; she had jumped into the scenic artists' Seine 7,000 times; had sent 5,000 bullets into her head with a revolver; stabbed herself as frequently as all her other "deaths" put together.

LAY CORNERSTONE.

Ceremonies Held Today by Daughters of the Confederacy.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Laying the cornerstone of the great monument in Arlington National Cemetery to the memory of the dead of the confederacy, was the principal event here yesterday in the opening program of the annual convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. Thousands of women were assembled to pay tribute to the memory of the men who fought for the south and surrounded the site of the monument to witness the ceremony conducted by Colonel Hilary A. Herbert, former secretary of the navy. William J. Bryan was the orator of the day.

THE WAY AMERICAN WOMEN WEAR CLOTHES

"No women wear their clothes better than the women of America, yet no women lose their opportunity in clothes as they do. This is apparently because they have not learned that the charm of dress is not so much in fashion as in individuality."

Mrs. Beatrice Meho, who lives in London and who claims to be the widow of Count Meho of Vienna, and who is now in New York, made the above comment on American women and their dress.

The Countess herself has a distinctive personality. Her face reminds one of some of the old paintings of Empress Josephine, and it is of that period that she says she feels herself to belong.

"I like the way American women dress for the street—that is, they wear quiet, unassuming garments—strictly tailor made, as they should be, for day clothes should always be conventional, but in the evening a woman should feel that she can express herself absolutely in her clothes. If she is a Pompadour type, she should forever cling to that wonderful picturesque style; if she is pink and white and petite, let her study the old prints of shepherdesses; if she is stately and aristocratic, let her shine in the regality of the Louis XIV and XV periods, or be a Gainsborough grande dame. If she 'feels' the clothes of that famous English painter.

"Ordinary evening dress means nothing to a woman—but if her personality is brought out in what she wears at evening functions she will appear at so wonderful an advantage.

"Mrs. Lionel Harris, who was formerly a Miss Oppenheim of New York and who lives in London, is the only American woman I know who wears clothes that exactly suit her personality. She looks precisely as we picture Madame Pompadour, and all her evening gowns are exact reproductions of that famous beauty's. She has prematurely gray hair, dark eyes and a wonderful coloring which makes her one of the most beautifully conspicuous women in London.

"There are many distinctive types of women here, but in the evening you all look alike, simply because you hide your individuality in 'colorless' clothes—clothes sometimes of great richness and elegance, to be sure, but without any distinctive note, the subtle thing that makes people individual.

"I am here for the purpose of studying American types of beauty. I want to see wherein American women fall in dress. I cannot say they fall entirely but with the wonderful beauty of face and figure and coloring which they possess and the variety of types, you should be the women of all women to stand for beauty.

"With not half the beauty that you women have, the French and Viennese women have far outdone you in that elusive charm—distinctive personality. The only trouble lies, as I say, in the fact that you dress too much alike, and you depend too much on the mode instead of an instinctive feeling for clothes which every well dressed woman must possess."

MILL DEAL IS NEARLY CLOSED

Standish-Hickey People Selling to Dimmick and Associates Now.

The negotiations for the sale of the North Bend Lumber Company mill at North Bend by the Standish-Hickey Company to Mr. Dimmick and associates has been practically closed and only awaits confirmation by the latter at San Francisco. It was understood today that Mr. Standish and Mr. Dimmick have been on the Bay for several days.

In connection with the mill sale is the sale of the Merchant's estate's eight hundred acres of timber on Coos River to Mr. Dimmick and his associates. This tract is the last remaining big tract of timber on tidewater, and is estimated second growth, crusting considerably over 50,000,000 feet.

If the deal is closed, soon as now expected, the mill will resume operations very soon.
