JOHN SINKIM

By BOB STANLEY

JOHN SINKIM mostly wears a smile. I like his glad and cheerful style for when he meets me on the street my sense of joy is most complete. He meets me with a friendly shake until my fingers nearly break, and then he pats me on my back till vertebrae in places crack. He asks about the family health, and whether Grip has come by stealth to clasp the family in its arms. Such subject always Sinkim charms. He has the family health in mind, because he's noble, good and kind, and not because he has desire to see them from this earth retire. He laughs whenever I tell a joke so old it nearly makes me choke, and listens patiently while I relate some yarn of years gone by just like all fellows like to tell when those around them listen well, and do not seem to be distressed, nor hurried, nor by business pressed.

Ah! yes, John Sinkim brings me joy. I know he does no means employ to make me think he is my friend like some whose minds have business trend. And, then I know he is sincere for when I'm sick, he's always near and wearing still a wistful smile that means, "I'll see you after while."

He brings such joy to every one until the earthly day is done, and then John cries as best he can for he's an undertaker man.

THE TIP OFF.

I can always tell for certain when old winter's on the way—

Not by wailing winds that whimper, of a shadow on the town—

Not by purple skies of summer that have faded into gray,

Nor the sere upon the larches where the leaves have fluttered down;

Nor does the answer reach me from a heavy frost about,

Nor the whisper of the south wind that the violets lie dead,

But I'm jerry to the tip off and beyond the slightest doubt

By the way I hate to tumble of a morning out of bed.

I'm a certain sure prophet when old winter's close at hand; And it isn't by the sting and zip that comes upon the breeze;

Not yet the wall thermometer that alumps to beat the band

As the mercury goes sliding on the pathway to a freeze;

But I know it by the feeling when it's time to rise and go

As I snuggle ever deeper in the blanket at my head—

And my heart is full of anguish and my soul is soused in woe

At the wretched thought appalling of a tumble out of bed.

General Grant's picture on the new $10,000 bills will look so well that almost anybody will hate to part with one of them.

Happiness often depends on the things we don't do.

The mug of a hard drinker is likely to give him away.

There's a lot to be seen at the seashore besides the shore.

A star by any other name would probably want to be the whole show.

If a man has loved and lost he is apt to consider marriage a failure.

THE BACHELOR GIRL SAYS:

A man is like a diamond; if he is big enough and brilliant enough a woman doesn't mind a few flaws in him; but a pearl and a woman are required to be absolutely perfect.

One would fancy that the teeth must be attached to the heart strings from the way in which women are continually falling in love with their dentists.

A man sometimes has to keep his conscience lubricated with alcohol, so that it won't grate on his finer feelings.

Virtue may be its own reward, but vice isn't always its own punishment.

A good way for a man to discover that he doesn't know a woman is to marry her.

ABE MARTIN SAYS:

It don't cost half as much to live if you're unpopular.

What's become o' th' sweet old fashioned girl that used t' tag after her mother?

A woman's idea of a rival is another woman who tries to have better clothes than hers.

A man gets divorce because wife wouldn't talk to him. Some men would give anything for a wife of that kind.

STORY FOR THE DAY.

Shorter Than Tall.

Some time ago the cashier of a bank in a small Missouri town was reported missing and an examination of his books revealed a large sum of money missing from the bank's vaults. The officials immediately sent to Kansas City for a detective. When he arrived he sought the president of the bank to secure a description of the missing cashier.

"How tall was your cashier?" he asked.

"Goodness knows," was the reply, "but he was $500 short."

Anyway, a woman can keep secret the mean things she knows about herself.

If a girl comes to the front door to meet a young man with her hair in crimpers and gowned in a kimono, it's a sign that she isn't crazy about him.
