BODIES OF MISSING AVIATORS ARE FOUND NEAR LOS ANGELES

Lawrence and Horace Kearny, Who Tried to Fly to San Francisco.

WAS WASHED UP ON BEACH NEAR REDONDO

Lawrence's Wife Identifies Husband's Body by Description of Clothes.

(By Associated Press to Coos Bay Times.)
LOS ANGELES, Dec. 19.—The bodies of Chester Lawrence, the newspaperman, and companion of Horace Kearny, who left here Saturday in a hydroplane, which brought both men, have been recovered from the sea. A message from Redondo states that the body of Lawrence was found floating in an inlet south of there and has been identified as that of Lawrence.
The body was clad in a gray sweater, across the front of which were the words "Press Car," also a white shirt, a black coat and corduroy trousers and high laced boots. "That was the way my husband was dressed on the trip with Kearny," said Mrs. Lawrence today. She then collapsed and was carried to her apartments.
LOS ANGELES, Dec. 19.—Paul Schaf, the man who found the wreckage of Kearny's hydro-aeroplane at Fisherman's Cove, Tuesday, reported by telephone today that he had found a body four miles south of the spot where the wreck of the aeroplane was discovered. Friends of Kearny and Chester Lawrence, the newspaperman, who accompanied Kearny on the fatal flight, have gone to the scene to attempt to identify the body as that of one of the missing men.

PEACE PARLEY AGAIN SUNDAY

Turks and Balkan Representatives Adjourn Hastily in London.

ADJOURN TO SUNDAY
LONDON, Dec. 19.—It was announced later today that the peace conference had adjourned until 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon. A reason was given for the hasty adjournment.

(By Associated Press to Coos Bay Times.)
LONDON, Dec. 19.—Whether peace is to be declared between Turkey and the Balkan allies or not continued, is expected to be settled within 48 hours. In diplomatic circles in London the opinion prevails that if obstacles which are likely to present themselves at the sessions of the peace conference at St. James' Palace can be surmounted before night, peace will be assured. The re-visituation of the Turkish fortress at Adrianople, which the Turks are reported to demand as a condition of waiving their demand that Greece sign the armistice is the most troublesome point and if the Turks maintain their attitude, it will indicate they are still firm on the subject of retention of the fortress after the war.
The peace plenipotentiaries of the Balkan allies and Turkey were in session today three-quarters of an hour. Then Rehid Pasha and Bah Pasha hurriedly left the palace and went to their hotel. They refused to give the reporters any information.

CLASH ABOUT SPECIAL MAN

Mayor Straw and Councilmen Differ Over Merchant's Patrolman's Duty.

Last evening's session of the Marshfield city council was enlivened by a clash over the merchant patrol which the council has been co-operating with the Front street property owners in maintaining. Mayor Straw declared that "he would not have any officer working for the city when the saloon men and other undesirable property owners were contributing to his salary."

The matter was brought up by R. K. Booth of the Merchants' Patrol association, appearing before the council and asking that the city continue its monthly contribution of $20 towards the salary of the patrolman. He said that there had been some difficulties about the matter and that the members had decided to have the officer henceforth act simply as a watchman and not as an officer of the city. He said that some had been complaining because as an officer the watchman was not always on his beat and that he thought it would be more satisfactory to have the man act simply as a nightwatch and in case of any trouble or arrests that the regular city officers should be called.

Councilman Ferguson objected to this plan. He said that the city was paying $20 a month to get the benefit of the officer's service and for one he was not in favor of paying it unless the city did get this service. Furthermore, he said, that a watchman would be useless unless given authority to make arrests. He said that he was a member of the merchants' patrol and unless the nightwatch was continued as a special officer he would withdraw and oppose the city paying $20 a month.

Mr. Booth said the members had talked it over and he had talked with Mayor Straw about the matter. He said that it was a suggestion that the change be made to overcome some difficulties that had cropped up.

Councilman Copple wanted to know if the members would not be satisfied if the nightwatch was given instructions to keep on his beat from Anderson avenue to Alder along the waterfront.

Mayor Straw said that he would not appoint any man a special officer to whom the saloons was contributing towards his salary. He said that Patrolman Doane was a good man and had done good service.

WITNESSES THINK BODY IS JOYNER'S

Identity of Corpse Found Near Tarheel Not Positively Established—Hearing Again Tomorrow.

The belief that the body found Monday near Tarheel Point by the Foster lad is that of Wm. Joyner, the South Slough rancher, who mysteriously disappeared a few months ago, was strengthened at a continuation of the coroner's inquest last night. Several witnesses who knew Joyner well testified that they believed the body was Joyner's, but none were absolutely positive.
Only one witness expressed the belief that the body was that of Capt. Gus Johnson, or some other one of the victims of the Osprey disaster, and that was Capt. Tyler of the tug Roscoe. Capt. Tyler testified that he was positive that the rope found attached to the body was the casting line of the Roscoe, which had been thrown to Capt. Johnson when the Osprey was going on the rocks.
On the other hand, C. G. Hockett of the Southern Oregon Company at Empire, testified that he thought that the rope was the same kind that he sold several thousand feet of each year for fishing rope. Mr. Hockett declared that he believed the body was Wm. Joyner's.

Capt. John Anderson, who knew Capt. Gus Johnson well, testified that he was nearly positive that the body was not Capt. Johnson's. He formerly sailed with Capt. Johnson.

M. Elliott of South Inlet testified that he thought the rope around the body might be a piece of fishing rope. However, some black spots on it were at irregular distances apart and this caused him to doubt that the rope had been used as a fishing line. He thought he body was Joyner's.

Gus Peterson of Empire and Carl Albrecht of Marshfield testified that they thought the body was Wm. Joyner's. Both knew Joyner well.

So far no one has been secured as a witness who will testify positively that the tattoo mark was on Joyner's left hand.

Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Lileqvist was present and assisted Coroner Wilson in conducting the inquest. The inquest was adjourned until tomorrow afternoon, when Clinton, the former companion of Joyner, will be here from Ten Mile to testify in the case. A number of South Inlet people and Empire people who knew Joyner well will also probably be summoned to testify. The session tomorrow promises to be decidedly interesting.

To Get Descriptions.

An effort is being made today to get a more accurate description of Captain Gus Johnson from his family near Gold Beach. The tattoo mark on his hand will be especially inquired into and also the kind of clothing that he wore on his last trip from there.

An effort is also being made to get the military description of Joyner. Today telegrams are to be sent to Joyner's old regiment and the War Department at Washington for the exact description of Joyner and his measurements when he entered the army.

The officials, while not able so far to get absolute evidence that the body is William Joyner's, are going on that theory. The fact that there was absolutely nothing in the pockets had strengthened their suspicion that the body was thrown in the Bay to hide a crime and try to conceal its identity.

The blue shirt found on the corpse was not of the heavy kind, but was of a rather light material.

Sheriff Gage, who from the first has believed that Joyner was shot in the back with a shotgun, from clues he got in the investigation, does not appear to be as sure about the body being Joyner's.

"PAPA KILLED MAMMA" LISPS CHILD

Three Men Wounded in Endeavor to Capture Memphian Man Who Killed Wife—Strongly Barricaded.

(By Associated Press to Coos Bay Times.)
MEMPHIS, Tenn., Dec. 19.—A 4 year-old child munching an apple walked into the living room of a boarding house here last night and announced that "papa has killed mamma." The child's mother, Mrs. Adam M. Boehler, was found at the door of her apartment with the head almost severed. Her husband had fled.

Shaulding Parsons, a drug clerk, shot and probably fatally wounded and Jesse Woolf, a police officer, was seriously wounded, and Charles Davis slightly wounded as a result of an attempt to arrest Boehler, who was located in a house in the central part of the city. Reinforcements could not dislodge Boehler, who is believed to be well armed with supplies and ammunition. The police say they will starve him out.

After besieging Boehler for eight hours the officers forced their way into Boehler's stronghold and shot and killed him. Boehler had first been partially overcome by fumes of formaldehyde forced into the room through holes cut into the wall and flooring.

JURORS HEAR HOCKIN TALES

Prosecuting Attorney in Dynamite Conspiracy Trial Relates Them.

(By Associated Press to Coos Bay Times.)
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 19.—Stories which the government charged Hockin told while acting as the head of the dynamite conspiracy, were related by Special Assistant District Attorney Noel in continuing his argument to the jury in the trial of the 40 accused "bomb plotters" today. In betraying all with whom he had to deal Hockin never told the same story twice, declared Noel. He said that Hockin was one of the original schemers to blow up non-union jobs. The dynamiters were about to betray him, so Hockin decided to ditch them.

MORGAN DENIES THAT THERE IS A "MONEY TRUST" POSSIBLE

SAYS HEARST BOUGHT LETTER

Former Senator Foraker Tells Committee About Archbold Literature.

(By Associated Press to Coos Bay Times.)
WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—The relations between former Senator Foraker of Ohio and John D. Archbold of the Standard Oil Company, as touched upon in the letters made public by William R. Hearst, was the subject of yesterday's hearing by the Senate Committee investigating the campaign contributions.

Foraker produced before the Senate Committee a statement prepared by Gilchrist Stewart purporting to be based on the description of W. W. Winkfield of How Winkfield and Charles Stump took the Archbold letters from the Standard Oil office and sold them to representative William R. Hearst.

"Mr. Hearst said yesterday he did not know how the letters were procured," declared Foraker. "Such a preposterous story as that you might tell to the marine but to no one else."

Foraker said that Stewart in 1908 sent him newspaper clippings in which W. A. Ullman, "attorney for C. P. Taft" was reported to have consulted Hearst about the letters before they were published and suggested that Ullman, Taft and John T. Cronin, the latter formerly connected politically with Hearst, be called as witnesses. Foraker declared that about a week ago he had Stewart go to Chicago where Wakefield was working as a waiter to ascertain what he knew. Foraker proceeded to detail Stewart's report but declared he did not vouch for its accuracy.

Great Financier Says That He Likes Combination Better Than Competition.

TELLS ABOUT CONTROL OF OTHER COMPANIES

Says He Has Only "a Little Bank Stock," a Million Dollars or So.

(By Associated Press to Coos Bay Times.)
WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—J. Pierpont Morgan resumed the witness stand today before the house "money trust" investigating committee. He was accompanied by several of his attorneys.

"There could be no money trust. All the banks and all the money in Christendom could not control money. The question of control is personal as to money and credits," declared J. Pierpont Morgan today to the committee.

The big financier was led up to his answer by the questioning of Samuel Undermyer, counsel of the committee, who asked Morgan, "If he did not feel his vast power," Morgan answered that he did not admit his vast power and did not feel it. Once when the lawyer and witness got into a discussion of competition and combination, Morgan said, "I would rather have combination than competition. I like a little competition, but I like combination better; without it you cannot do a thing. But no one could monopolize money. One man might get control of railroads or merchandise, but never money and credit." Morgan's declaration that there could be no money trust was emphasized by a vigorous bang with his fist on the arm of his chair.

The financier testified as to the relations of the "House of Morgan" with several great corporations. He testified that he had approved the prices at which subsidiaries of the United States Steel were taken into the big steel corporation, but Morgan only said he might have decided who should not go on.

His holdings of certain bank stocks he characterized as "Not very much, about a million dollars," much to the amusement of the committee and the crowd. The financier joined in heartily.

The principal part of Morgan's testimony on concentration of money and credits will be resumed this afternoon.

Morgan answered with apparent freedom, all questions. He agreed that through "Voting trusts" several of which existed in his company, a few trustees could name directors, who in turn would name officers of great interstate industrial or railroad corporations. Morgan denied that he believed in interlocking directorates where two or three men held directorships in several banks and trust companies or corporations, could bring about control and unity of action.

He declared that a majority on directory boards, such men could not dictate the affairs or control of corporations. The financier took direct issue with Undermyer as to the opportunity offered a few men to get control of the general banking conditions through such participation as Morgan and Company have on a board of directors of the leading banks of New York.

The company's attorneys explained to the court that they considered the only practicable method by which stock could be distributed without irreparable injury would be for the Union Pacific Company to offer it to its own shareholders pro rata, according to the amount of their holdings, for purchase at a fair price, or to distribute it as a dividend to its stockholders, entitled to a dividend. They declared that the Attorney General was opposed to such a plan. It was argued that the plan advocated by the railroad attorneys was in conformity with the practice in other dissolutions, directed by the court.

"To refuse to allow the Union Pacific shareholders to participate in such a distribution," declared the attorneys, "would expose them to serious loss and possibly irreparable injury."

by lending fifty million dollars from the treasury to national banks.

The house passed the Burnett literacy immigration bill to bar immigrants over 16 who cannot read. It also resumed consideration of the Indian appropriation bill.
