LARGE CRANE

Lad Thinks Bird Is Stork, and Wonder Where Is Baby.

VANCOUVER, Wash., Dec. 20.—A long-legged crane, two boys and a dog were the principals in a tragedy today, in Oregon Slough on Hayden Island, in which the storklike bird lost its life.

The boys, with their .22 caliber rifle and shepherd dog, were hunting on the island and came upon the crane standing on one leg, and probably asleep. Crawling close, one boy fired and wounded the big crane, which could not fly, but tried to get to deeper water, and succeeded in seizing the bird's leg. Soon the boys overtook the floundering creature, and wrapping a handkerchief around the crane's bill, picked him up bodily and carried him home.

"Look, mama, we've got a stork," the boys shouted, as they arrived at home, "but he didn't have a baby when we got him."

AN ICELESS ICEBOX IOWAN'S INVENTION.

MASON CITY, Ia., Dec. 20.—It now looks as if a Hampton man had an invention which would do away entirely with the iceman. It will be known as the iceless icebox and if it measures up to its claims it will be a very present help in times of trouble and will entirely do away with the much slandered iceman. It is simply a miniature ice making device which fits right into most any refrigerator and makes ice without labor of any kind with the exception of once in awhile putting in the necessary chemicals. It has been tried and found not wanting along this line. It can be used anywhere and everywhere. The farmer can have it at no less cost than the city man. Financially it is to be a big saving. The plant can be installed at a very small cost and to maintain it will not cost more than one-fifth as much as the cost of ice.

The new invention is covered all over with patents. A number of commercial clubs have been after this new invention trying to get the manufacture in other cities, but it looks as if it would be held at Hampton. The Hampton foundry and machine shop will make the iceless icebox.

PHREW! BURNING ONIONS SCENT CITY OF CHICAGO.

CHICAGO, Dec. 20.—A three-story onion warehouse containing many tons of the odoriferous vegetables, caught fire here and blazed up rapidly, a few doors from a west side hospital. The hospital officers requested the firemen not to sound their bells, or make unnecessary noises, and there followed the spectacle of fire chiefs communicating with their lieutenants by signs and sending notes to the pipemen. The powerful odor of the boiling and frying onions pervaded the entire district within a half mile radius.
