

Why You Should Attend the Coos Bay Business College

BECAUSE the training will give you a foothold in any one of the three thousand avenues of business and finance; and immediately makes you a reasonable candidate for the best job that can offer. BECAUSE your own ability is a more powerful introduction than that of forty friends; it carries more conviction than a thousand testimonials.

BECAUSE you will never find a business trained girl in want or a business trained boy in the down-and-out club.

BECAUSE many are called and few wake up; many hope, but few have wills—all showing why it is that a good effort of the brain is all that lies between a drudge and a manager.

BECAUSE the men who studies one minute, eliminates from the competition the fellow who fools away that minute.

BECAUSE you want a good position some day, and it would be silly to ask for it, when your lack of business knowledge renders you incompetent.

BECAUSE our course in modern accountancy, business correspondence, rapid arithmetic, penmanship, shorthand, touch typewriting, advertising, general salesmanship, will give you a greater impetus toward success than fifteen years of petty apprenticeship.

BECAUSE you cannot afford to guess and lose when you have a chance to know and win.

BECAUSE there is sanity in the confidence that is backed by training.

BECAUSE training COMPELS success.

BECAUSE we will place our first fifty graduates in good positions without loss of a minute.

BECAUSE we prepare for court reporting and for teaching commercial subjects in high schools, academies and business colleges as well as for accountancy and shorthand positions of all kinds.

BECAUSE self-support is a rock on which self-respect can stand erect.

BECAUSE we have no graduates walking the streets looking for jobs.

MAKE STUDY OF ANVIL CAUGHT IN BAD STORM

Federal and College Experts Inspect Forests Near Ashland.

Corvallis, Ore., Jan. 16.—W. D. Edmonston of the United States Bureau of Entomology, expert in forest insect control, and V. I. Saffro, department of forest entomology at Oregon Agricultural College, left Corvallis for Ashland, where they will make an inspection of the forests in that vicinity to determine the extent of insect damage to the timber.

The importance of such damage to Oregon forests is said to be second only to that caused by fire and the problem of controlling the insects responsible for the damage is now claiming attention of the Federal government and experiment station of the college and larger timber interests of the state.

In the northeastern and southern parts of the state some control work has been started and the success of these experiments indicates that it will be but a few years before the forest insect problem will be solved by the establishment of a control system similar to that now used by the forest fire guards.

The plan is to appoint forest insect control guards who will have much larger territories to cover than are assigned to the fire guards.

ANVIL CAUGHT IN BAD STORM

Little Steamer Rides Out Bad Gale and Captain and Others Are Hurt.

A Portland paper says: Captain and mate looking as though they had been in a fight and the remainder of the ship's company badly shaken up, tells the story of the gas steamer Anvil's experience with a 75-mile gale off the Yaquina bay harbor last week that showed the mettle of the little packet. The Anvil arrived this morning at 1 o'clock, after an absence of over a month, during which time she was either harried or engaged in fruitless attempts to enter some of the stout harbors on her route.

During a fierce gale that struck the little coaster Saturday morning Captain Levi Snyder was thrown violently on the bridge and had both eyes blackened and his nose skinned. First Officer E. J. Barnes also had his hand severely hurt in scrambling along the deck.

The Anvil anchored off the Sinaloa river Friday afternoon waiting high water to get into that port. The weather looked fine, say the officers, but before high water they had to heave the anchor and put out to sea. At about 4 o'clock Saturday the full force of a south-east gale hit the Anvil, and she was occupied from that time until 6 o'clock in getting her anchor to the cathead. It required all the power of engines ahead to take up the slack on the anchor chain.

From there she ran for Yaquina bay for shelter, but was unable to cross in after she arrived there, so she remained holed to for six hours there until the force of the gale was spent. During her experience in the storm she had her fore stay-sail carried away, that being the only damage done to the vessel.

On her late voyage down the coast the Anvil left here December 1, going from here to Haddon. She then made Marshfield and took on supplies for the Rogue river, where they were almost devoid of provisions. She was harbored there for 14 days, and then went back to Haddon, from which port she returned to Portland. Officers and crew are loud in their praise of the manner in which the Anvil behaved in her worst storm.

RAILWAY GRADE FOR LONG ROAD

Northern Pacific Will Aid the Pacific Highway.

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 16.—The Northern Pacific railroad company will give its abandoned right of way and old roadbed between Tacoma and Vancouver, Washington, to the state of Washington for use as a connecting link in the Pacific highway planned to connect San Diego, California, and Vancouver, B. C. This statement was made by Sennel Hill, good roads advocate, upon his return from the east, where he conferred with President Howard Elliott of the Northern Pacific on the subject.

The Northern Pacific has spent $2,000,000 on the property which is abandoned, during the work of straightening its coast line and constructing a double track system between Portland and Puget Sound and is willing to release it to the state for a consideration of $1.

"Should the state accept this offer, there is no reason why the Pacific highway in Washington should not be finished by October 1," said Mr. Hill. "The railroad company had planned to build four steel bridges across the Cowlitz and Tootle rivers and the Big Draw. The stone piers of these proposed bridges, built at great expense, are as good today as ever and may be made available for highway bridges so that should the state accept President Elliott's offer, several important engineering problems of the Pacific highway would be settled.

"It is difficult to determine just how much of the Northern Pacific right of way will be available, but the grading and filling cost more than $2,000,000.

"Some of the roadbed has stood for 30 years and may be readily converted to the uses of a public highway. Included in the roadbed is a stretch of graded right of way on which Jay Gould spent $1,000,000 in 1899 and 1890."
