Coos Bay's Best Valentine

ALL Coos Bay should unite next Thursday in cordial greetings to the Adeline Smith and Captain Olson and his gallant crew, and in doing so, honor the man who made the coming of this addition to the Coos Bay fleet possible, Mr. C. A. Smith. It is a creditable thing to be hospitable under all circumstances, but at this time it is a pleasure as well as a duty that awaits the citizens of Coos Bay in extending a warm welcome to one of the largest and most modern lumber carrying vessels in the world.

The coming of the Adeline Smith marks an epoch in the shipping and commerce of Coos Bay. It is the largest vessel ever built for exclusive use of the commerce of this port. Its advent means a still larger and greater development of the important industries of this section, lumber and coal.

That the first cargo of this splendid vessel on her maiden voyage should be the machinery for the new pulp and paper mill, being built here by Mr. Smith, is additional reason why every loyal resident of Coos Bay, man, woman and child, should turn out as evidence of their approval and appreciation.

The Times has previously mentioned that they produce more than lumber at the big mill across the bay. The output of ideas is greater and more far reaching than the phenomenal cut of the big band saws. It seems strange, but has proven true that a lumber manufacturer from a prairie state has revolutionized the ocean carrying lumber trade of the Pacific Coast, which is the greatest in the world, in four brief years. The Nann Smith lumber schooner was built to conform to the ideas of C. A. Smith. She has proven such a success that a sister ship designed along the same lines, but with larger carrying capacity has been built. That vessel is the Adeline Smith, which will arrive Thursday.

Her coming means a large addition to the importance of this harbor as a lumber port. It means additional prosperity for the city and its citizens. There should be universal recognition and appreciation of this fact by making the occasion a gala day of glad welcome to the vessel, its officers and men and honor for the builder and owner, Mr. C. A. Smith.

Coos Bay's best valentine, the Adeline Smith, should be fittingly received.

Let us make a rousing Coos Bay welcome.

Thomas J. Camp Claims He Was Ousted as Postmaster for Refusal.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—With the examination of Postmaster Thomas J. Camp of Beebe, Ark., the senate campaign funds committee today launched into an inquiry of the campaign of 1912. Details of the assessment upon officeholders in Arkansas by the Republican state committee were described by Camp, who said that he recently had been compelled to resign under protest as postmaster at Beebe, Ark. Camp produced letters signed by Gordon H. Campbell, treasurer of the Republican state committee, demanding a contribution of nine dollars. Camp did not make the contribution. He wrote to Hitchcock asking whether he would be removed if he failed to comply with the request. He received no answer but in November and December received letters from First Assistant Postmaster General Grandfield demanding his resignation.

AVERILL NOTE CASE OF SUIT

Echo of Electric Line Project from Coos Bay to Roseburg Up in Court.

(Special to The Times.)
COQUILLE, Ore., Feb. 11.—The case of F. W. Stevens vs. A. H. Stutsman is on trial here today. The suit is brought to recover on a note given by A. H. Stutsman to Geo. F. Averill when the latter was promoting the electric line from Coos Bay via Coos River to or near Roseburg. Averill sent out a lot of blank notes in place of stock subscriptions. Later he turned over Mr. Stutsman's note to Mr. Stevens in payment for printing literature about the matter and now Mr. Stevens wants to collect. The case is of considerable interest as it is understood that quite a few other notes of Coos county people on the similar deal will be sued on if Mr. Stevens collects this one.

English Parliament Takes Action to Comply With Dead Men's Wishes.

(By Associated Press to Coos Bay Times.)
LONDON, Feb. 11.—Grief and pride over the simple narrative of high courage, endurance and sacrifices given in Explorer Scott's farewell message to the world are close competitors for dominance of the feelings of the British public today. His closing words were, "Had we lived, I should have had a tale to tell to reach the heart of every Englishman. These rough notes and our dead bodies must tell the tale. But surely, surely a great rich country like ours will see that those who are dependant upon us are properly cared for."

These words had an electric effect and steps have already been taken to respond to Scott's appeal to the nation, assuring a comfortable future for those dependant upon the men who, while awaiting certain death, could still write that they did not regret their journey. Scott's interest in the welfare of his men was always pronounced. Before leaving for the pole he arranged for the sale of the story of the expedition, the financial returns, from which was to go to increase the financial reward of those men, who had undertaken to share with him the dangers of the Antarctic region. A memorial service for Scott and his companions will be held at the St. Paul cathedral Friday. Flags in all parts of London are at half mast today.

The tragedy of Scott's expedition was referred to today in the House of Commons by Premier Asquith, who spoke with such emotion that his words were almost at times inaudible. He indicated that the government would take care of the dependants of dead members of the expedition.

CARNegie TO AID LIBRARY

Marshfield Board May Ask $10,000 Building from Philanthropist.

At a meeting of the Marshfield Public Library Board last evening, steps were taken to secure a Carnegie Library building for Marshfield. This matter was under consideration several years ago, but then the matter was deferred because of the expectancy that a rapid growth of the town would entitle Marshfield to a much more imposing edifice from the millionaire steel maker than could then be obtained.

Last evening the matter was discussed at some length and the board decided to confer with the city council, C. A. Smith, and others about taking immediate steps to secure a building.

Under the present conditions, it is believed that Marshfield could secure a $10,000 Carnegie building. A condition of the Carnegie Library gifts is that the town shall yearly appropriate ten per cent of its gift for the maintenance of the library and that a free site shall be provided. The city council is now appropriating $900 a year, practically meeting the ten per cent requirement, and it is believed that if none of the city's present property is deemed suitable for a location that some of the other large property owners here might either give outright or sell at a reasonable figure grounds for the building.

The matter will be taken up at once by the library board.

Last evening a vote of thanks was tendered the ladies of the Bridge Club for the $121 donation, which was made from the receipts of the benefit ball at the Eagle's hall last week.
