New Dresses and Suits So Prettily Made You Can't Help Wanting Them

If these new Dresses and Suits that have just arrived had no other recommendation but their beauty, nearly every woman who sees them would want one. However, they become decidedly more attractive when they are examined closely and one sees the excellence of the materials and the wonderfully fine workmanship that has been used in putting them together.

It's a recent shipment which introduces many charming new fashion ideas and color effects practically every one will be considered a distinct novelty.

No branch of this store's business more forcibly demonstrates how thorough is its service than in Ladies' Suits, Dresses, and Coats. And never has the superiority of its service been so emphatic as in the thoroughly thorough style assortments of Spring and Summer wearing apparel. One can begin as low as $4.50 for a Dress or $12.50 for a Suit and select through easy price stages, up to luxurious garments that are fairly priced at $45.00.

And the woman who wishes inexpensive garments has the satisfaction of knowing that she is correctly attired as well as the one whose tastes and demands are for the more elaborate.

THINKS ANVIL MAY BE SAVED

Owners Think They Can Float Stranded Schooner Soon—Wreck Due to Engine.

Archie Johnston returned last evening from a business trip to the E-mail and Umpqua. He reports the schooner Anvil high and dry on the beach and in such a position that the owner, Captain Veasey, expects to pull her off on one of the high tides between today and Wednesday, a period of unusual high tides. The means of procedure is interesting. A five ton rock has been anchored and to this is attached a 1 1/2 inch wire cable and at high tide by the means of two tugs and this arrangement, Captain Veasey expects to float the Anvil.

The little gasoline craft, which went ashore in the gale, is said to have been wrecked by engine trouble. One engine balked and she got out of the channel and struck, losing her rudder. Then the other engine went back on her.

The Anvil went ashore nearly 1,000 feet north of the channel. Johnston Porter, of Porter Brothers, who was here yesterday, says the Anvil must have got out of the channel when she struck the first time as the floe came up a couple of days later, drawing a foot or two more water than the Anvil, at low tide and found plenty of water.

Rumors of possible charges against Captain Levi Snyder, formerly of Coos county and master of the Anvil, have been rife at Florence but the reports there about his personal actions and deficiencies being responsible for the disaster not being corroborated.

A Portland paper says: "Reported from Captain L. Veasey, who is looking after the latter vessel, are reassuring, as he says he expects to float her at the next high tide. Her rudder is gone, sternpost damaged and a leak has developed, but it is not doubted that she will be floated."
