cult court, he had just as well stayed at home as far as giving any of the litigants any relief is concerned. With the exception of one or two cases where there was no appearance on the part of the defendants, the entire docket was continued until the next term. The case against Curry County by the Pacific Borax Co. for a reduction of assessment, although all witnesses had been summoned and were on the ground, was continued. What excuse George M. Brown, District Attorney, has to offer for not being here is yet to be learned. When public servants fail to serve anything but their personal convenience, it is time the people were calling them off of their exalted thrones.
