DIRECTOR FENTON ANNOUNCES PROGRAM TO BE GIVEN AT MASONIC OPERA HOUSE THAT EVENING.

Director R. N. Fenton, of the Coos Bay Concert Band announces that a concert will be given next Tuesday evening at the Masonic Opera House. It has been decided that during the summer months to have the concerts on week day evenings on account of so many people going on outing trips Sundays. After another week or two, or as soon as the weather will permit, the concerts will be given at the city park. The following is the program for next Tuesday night:

March "Grandioso".....Seitz
Overture "Stradella".....Plotow
March "Dawn of Love".....Bendix
Humoresque on "Oh You Beautiful Doll".....Lampe
(Introducing the wonderful automatic doll.)

Serenade d'Amour.....Romano
Selection "Carmen".....Bizet
March "The Stars and Stripes Forever".....Sousa
Star Spangled Banner.

Long Beach Inner Harbor. V. C. Gorst, interested with them, made arrangements with the city council last night for landing here. Mr. Gorst informs the Press that he may establish a hydroplane headquarters in this city.—Long Beach Daily Press.

DOMINATING the Loggia del Lanzi in Florence is the splendid bronze of Perseus holding aloft the head of Medusa, with coiling serpents for hair. Even her blood, as she lies dead at the feet of Perseus, streams forth like serpents. Benvenuto Cellini, who modeled this monument, had a passion for art and homicide, and was one of the vainest and most gifted of men. His life was one long adventure. Born in Florence in 1500, Cellini was expected to follow his father's profession of musician and indeed he became an excellent flute player, but at 15 he turned to designing and metal work. He was one of the best goldsmiths of his time.

He began his fighting career as a youth, killed the Constable de Bourbon in the attack on Rome in 1527, and within two years he had slain Philibert, Prince of Orange, a man who had killed his brother, and also a certain goldsmith in Naples. There were several others he nearly killed. He lived to be 71 years old.

Cellini asked an enormous price for his "Perseus," on which he worked for years. When the Duke de Medici, at whose suggestion it was modeled, complained that the price demanded would build churches and palaces, the sculptor replied that this was true, but any number of architects could do that, but nobody else could make such a statue.

Of all the wonderful folk in Greek mythology, Perseus was about the busiest. He was the son of Jupiter and Danae. When Perseus was born Danae's father, Acrisius placed both in a chest and threw them into the sea. Jupiter came to the rescue of course, and brought them to a friendly kingdom, whose ruler sent Perseus, grown to a man's estate, to fetch the head of Medusa, a feat that no mere human could hope to accomplish.

Medusa was one of the monsters in human form called Gorgons. Instead of hair, her head was covered with hissing serpents. She had golden wings, brazen claws and enormous tusks for teeth. Her body was covered with scales. Her head was so fearful that anyone who looked at it immediately changed to stone. Indeed, to slay so terrible a creature seemed impossible.

Possessing himself of winged sandals, a magic wallet and the helmet of Pluto, which made the wearer invisible, as well as a sickle from Mercury and a mirror from Minerva, Perseus was ready to meet the horrible Medusa with reasonable confidence in his victory. Using his winged sandals he mounted into the air and swiftly arrived at Medusa's dwelling place.

Now, if Perseus had looked directly at Medusa he straightway would have been turned to stone. But looking at her through the mirror he was perfectly safe, and quickly cut off her head with the sickle. He placed it in the wallet, put on his Plutonic helmet, thus becoming invisible and had no difficulty at all in escaping. The statue shows him at the triumphant moment of the tragedy.

Every day a different human interest story will appear in The Times. You can get a beautiful intaglio reproduction of this picture, with five others, equally attractive, 7 by 9 1/2 inches in size, with this week's "Mentor." In "The Mentor" a well known authority covers the subject of the pictures and stories of the week. Readers of The Times and "The Mentor" will know Art, Literature, History, Science, and Travel, and own exquisite pictures. On sale at The Times office. Price ten cents. Electric Lighting Means Real Home Comfort

One hundred years ago the family gathered around the dim light of a tallow candle—or drew up as close as the heat would permit to the flickering light of the old-fashioned log fire. Reading or sewing at night in those days was a hardship—little wonder our ancestral eyes failed before their time.

Today a single 60 watt tungsten (Mazda) electric lamp will give 48 times as much light as the candle of a century ago—and the light is steady—soft—white

Electric light is the first aid to home comfort. Did you ever investigate its cost? It will surprise you to know how little it costs to wire an unwired house. Telephone 178 and let us submit an estimate on your property.
