The undertaker LaFrance refuses that he found the body in the position where it was later re-discovered. He and a companion then conceived the insurance fraud, caphalized the body and kept it until he was ready to make his disappearance. Later he repeated his story, but said that he alone carried out the details.

After planting the body he sald he bought clothing similar to that in which they had dressed it and told his friends he was preparing for a fishing trip on the Clackamas. He made it a point to meet friends and show them his outfit.

Leaving for Estacada, he met one of his assistants and gave his army knapsack and rod to him. This man was dressed in khaki similar to that worn by LaFrance and it is supposed he talked to the con-ductor and bought sardines in Es-tacada, as LaFrance declared he dropped off the car at the Oaks and returned to the city.

LaFrance has told many stories regarding the planting of the body none of which has been substantiated, though every effort has been made to do so. He appears under severe nervous strain and continually moves and fidgets about. He shows the effect of his imprisonment.
