Change in County.

The Coos County High School Association has made some slight changes in the regulations. It has been decided that in place of the present series of debates to divide into two divisions, the Coquille Valley and Coos Bay. Then the champions of the valley will debate the champions of the Bay for the county championship.

It has also been decided to hold a Coos County Oratorical Contest in which only boys will compete and a county declamatory contest in which only girls will compete.

No News Received.—No word has been received here as to developments in the Kinney-Wisey deal, although it was expected that at Portland yesterday the final effort to settle the negotiations without a receiver would be made. Mrs. Kinney stated this afternoon that she had not received any word, although if anything important had transpired, the understanding was that she would be notified.

No Strike News.—There were few developments in the I. W. W. strike situation here today with the exception that it now appears practically certain that the strike will not seriously handicap any of the lumber companies. With the exception of a small band of I. W. W. who have been traveling round the Coquille Valley and visiting some of the camps, the I. W. W. have been little in evidence. Their hope of getting assistance from sympathizers is now said to be gone. All of the camps are running. Some organizers who were brought here to assist Secretary Edgeworth are said to have accomplished little.

Now is your chance to save a quarter by getting flour of Haines.

SALT WATER RESERVOIR FOR FIRE PROTECTION.

Editor Times:—Why not have city arrange for salt water fire protection by installing a large reservoir on Knob Hill, from where the entire city could be protected by a gravity system, with plenty of pressure to throw the water on top of any building in town, without the aid of a fire engine? Now is the time to secure the site for the reservoir at least. —A CITIZEN.

Along the Waterfront.

The Rustler arrived in here yesterday from Rogue River and will make a trip to Florence soon. The Speedwell, Grace Dollar, and Brooklyn arrived at Bandon last night. The Elizabeth and Advance sailed from Bandon last night for San Francisco.

WAITING

IT'S WEARY work, when we old men wait, remote from the mad world's hum; we wait and watch by the garden gate for the railway that never come. So many wait for the vanished things that never again arrive, for the gleam of eyes, for the whirl of wings, for the friends who are not alive. So many wait in the tumbled wreck of their early hopes, I know! I'm waiting now for the rumbling wheels and the locomotive whistle's blow. The railway was promised in the long ago, when my heart was young and brave, but it doesn't come and I toddle slow again adown to a misfit grave. The newsboy comes on his round, by heck, and over the gate I lean, and he brings the news of a hundred things but no timetable there is seen. My gray hair falls on my wrinkled neck and my eyes have lost their glow; I have waited so long for that promised train and the shriek of the whistle's blow. It's weary work, for the old, old men, who wait as the shades descend, for joys that will never come again, for comrade and guest and friend. To wait and watch by the garden wall, for the things that are past and gone, till the sun goes down and the shadows fall and the night is stealing on. It's weary work to remain on deck and wait till your system is filled with woe, and wait and wait for that railway train and the shriek of the whistle's blow.
