CHINA WILL PENSION

ORIENTAL GOVERNMENT CARE FOR RELATIVES AMERICAS CRIPPLE WAR MERLY HEADED CHINA MY.

(SPECIAL 242, 01 1913)
DENVER, June 5.—China most with the filing of the late Homer Lea, who died in a career, comes the announcement of the Chinese government referring on his widow, Mrs. Lea, and his sisters, Ernest Lea, pensions enabling them in a style commensurate with of a general of the Chinese army.
Homer Lea left an estate exceeding $4,000 in real estate in California.
He had a varied career from infancy. He sold newspapers by doing odd jobs made a living. Always possessed of a derelict, shortly after attaining majority he went abroad, to Japan, later going to China, a military genius, never leaving his home land until later he became a general's commission in the Chinese army.
He was chief adviser to the revolutionists who established the Republic, and while in the Republic success contracted a malaria which he never recovered.
Lea wrote a book showing the senseless condition of the Republic, which gave him fame in his own land, but not until he achieved fame in another, an alien race.
