SOME NEW RULES ON SPOONING

PITTSBURG, June 6.—Chief of Police McQuaide is in favor of matrimony and believes in encouraging courtship.

Recently there was an agitation in favor of reviving an old ordinance prohibiting "spooning" in parks and other public places. A delegation of women called on the chief and declared courting in parks should be stopped and requested his co-operation.

McQuaide said he would think it over. He did think it over and the result is after Monday the following order will be in effect:

"Officers will promptly arrest all 'mashers' and lock them up on charges of disturbing the peace."

"Real sweethearts may kiss and may walk or sit with their arms about each other, either under arc lights or in the shadows, so long as they go home at reasonable hours."

"Officers not certain of being able to discriminate between real and imitation sweethearts will report to the chief for assignment in the business district or for instructions."

Now the women threaten to appeal to the city council.

[By Associated Press to Coos Bay Times.]

VANCOUVER, B. C., June 6.—Sixty-one strike breakers from England, who came to work in coal mines in Nanaimo, refused to go to work and are being cared for at the local headquarters of the United Mine Workers of America. The men say they will not work in the mines until the strike is settled.

ALL UNCOVERED FRUIT WILL BE CONFISCATED.

PORTLAND, Ore., June 5.—Market Inspector Sarah A. Evans and Additional Market Inspector "Buck" Keith are experiencing considerable trouble enforcing the ordinances covering the handling of fruit and berries. All fruits and berries must be in new crates or boxes, and they must be covered with sheets of clean, thin wrapping paper before the board covers are nailed down. When on exhibition in the markets fruits and berries must be covered with netting of some sort to keep flies off them. A large number of unripe and molded strawberries have been discovered already and confiscated. All dealers have been informed that unless the laws are obeyed the fruits and berries will be confiscated.

etry and fascination of the ordinary mustache has been scotched by the French scientist, Dr. Pierre Jacques, in his recent researches as to the habits of various bacilli.

It seems that the doctor's daughter recently became affianced to a young officer who had a fine military mustache. Following a custom which even the scientists admit is prevalent as between engaged couples, kisses were interchanged between the young pair when opportunities occurred.

After one such opportunity the doctor insisted upon removing the bacilli from his lovesick daughter's lips, and treated them with a reacting agent. He found over 1600 bacilli per cubic millimeter of the solution. This fact caused the doctor to doubt whether he should allow the engagement of his daughter to continue.

The fiancé recently had the misfortune to burn one side of his mustache through cigarette smoking, and was obliged to have it completely shaved off. Dr. Jacques seized the occasion to make a further investigation, and found that after the removal of the fiancé's mustache, the number of bacilli was reduced to less than a tenth of the former number.

He has now given his consent to the marriage subject to an undertaking by the fiancé to always shave his upper lip. His advice to ladies is to avoid being kissed by men who grow mustaches.

American Birds of Beauty

"LEARN ONE THING EVERY DAY"

No. 6. SNOWY HERON

Copyright, 1913, by The Associated Newspaper School, Inc.

IN FORMER years a journey to Florida meant, among other things, a sight of thousands of snowy herons. A trip down any of the rivers on one of the little stern-wheelers was sure to reveal hundreds, but he is fortunate indeed who sees half a dozen of these immaculate birds in a whole season there now. Along the upper reaches of the St. John and its tributaries they nested in thousands, filling the air when distributed, like some enormous white cloud. In those days they did not confine themselves to tropical regions, but wandered as far north as Maine. On Long Island the gunners were well acquainted with them, and as late as 1910 a few were noted in South Carolina.

These dainty birds of the South fall without the pale of protective coloration. Against the dark green of mangroves or cypress their snow-white forms stand out like cameos. Deep in the interior of the Everglades a handful of the once powerful Seminole Indians are making their last stand. In these same wilds the last of the snowy herons are struggling against extinction at the hands of the plume hunters. They are gradually disappearing. Often they are shot from nests that frequently contain four or five young who die a lingering death by starvation.

The National Association of Audubon Societies has accomplished wonders in protecting the snowy heron and other birds. The setting aside of reservations on Government land by executive order, where the feathered inhabitants can find sanctuary, has saved more than one species from annihilation.
