WILL BUILD AT FLORENCE

Odd Fellows May Have Three-Story Block.

The Florence West says: "Plans are being drawn for a large building to be erected by Heceta Lodge, I. O. O. F., on their lots at the corner of Washington and Front streets in Florence. The size of the building has not been decided yet, but it will probably be three stories in height. The intention is to have two or three store rooms on the first floor, while the second will be divided into office rooms and the upper floor will be used for lodge purposes. Whether the material used in the structure will be lumber, brick or cement, will depend largely upon the cost."

WEDDINGS AT BULLARDS.

The double wedding at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bullard, Bullards Oregon, was a beautiful culmination of courtship of their son and daughter, Chester and Christine. Chester Bullard and Miss Jessie Fogle, Owen W. Evans and Christine E. Bullard were quietly united in marriage by Rev. H. C. Hartraft—Bandon World.

CHINESE HAVE SUFFRAGETTES

Oriental Women Strike Out "Obey" in Wedding Ceremony.

(Special to The Times.) SAN FRANCISCO, June 12.—The suffragette movement has struck Chinatown, and some of the eligible male Celestials are anxious. No longer will the Chinese bride use the word "obey." Miss Eng Gun Low, now Mrs. Chin Chee, of New York, set the fashion. Recently married in that city on the American plan, she told the officiating clergyman she was: "How you say—suffragette" and insisted on the word obey being left out. It would not have made much difference had the minister officiating not given the story to the papers. But he did, and a number of copies were sent here. Result, all Chinese fiancées are now declaring they will not "obey" either, all same Eng Gun Low.

BOYS ON LONG HIKE.

Clyde Haines and Harold Miller to Walk Across Continent. (Special to The Times.) SHAMOKIN, Pa., June 12.—W. Clyde Haines and Harold Miller left here to walk behind a push cart to the Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco in 1915. They will carry their own cooking apparatus and are not doing the walk on a bet, but merely for a long outing. Mayors of towns and Postmasters of cities will not be bothered for autographs and neither will the boys sell their pictures to make expenses. Both are well to do.

FIREMEN TAKE NOTICE.

All members of the Fire Department are urged to be present Thursday evening, June 12, 7:30, for drill. This is important. L. W. TRAVER, Secretary.

DUTCH MASTERPIECES

No. 4. "IN A COURTYARD." BY PIETER DE HOECH. Copyright, 1913, by The Associated Newspaper School, Inc.

IT is very certain that Pieter de Hooch lived. In fact, there were a great many of him, for nearly every town in Holland has a large assortment. One of these was a wonderful Pieter de Hooch, as is proved by the two hundred and fifty paintings now in existence. In 1874 the Berlin Museum paid $26,000 for one of his paintings. Probably if anyone had offered a quarter of that sum for all of Pieter de Hooch's work and for Pieter himself during his lifetime, the would-be purchaser would have been locked up as a dangerous lunatic.

Apparently no one had the slightest interest in Pieter the painter while he lived, nor for more than a century after he died.

But Pieter de Hooch had no more interest in people than they had in him, if one is to judge by his pictures. As Professor J. C. Van Dyke says in his book, "Old Dutch and Flemish Masters," "From his pictures one might say that Pieter de Hooch had only a slight interest in the intellectual, moral or spiritual life of humanity. He used men and women much as he used chairs, tables, floors and windows. People were to him objects showing lines, mass and color. He never troubled himself to any extent with their lives or adventures, their thoughts or their emotions."

When Pieter de Hooch was living Cromwell waged war on Holland, and the country was seething with internal disturbances. Only those who could make a noise in the world attracted any attention, and it is not of record that Pieter made any more noise than a mouse. Apparently all he wanted was the privilege of painting the most marvelous interiors, with amazing effects of light and shade. As in the case of Hobbema, De Hooch's greatness was first recognized in England, where the authorities made such a fuss about his work that Holland swiftly came to the conclusion that it had neglected one of its great men. Then began the difficult business of finding out something about him.

After great searching it was finally determined that he was born in Rotterdam about 1632. What he did and where he lived during the first twenty-three years of his life are unknown. He is described as a painter and servant to a certain merchant who was something of a patron of the arts. De Hooch lived in Delft for two years, from 1655 to 1657, as the record of his marriage there and his membership in the painters' guild prove. From that time until he turned up in Amsterdam eleven years later there is no trace of him. He painted pictures in 1677, but after that all record of him is lost, except that he died in Haarlem about 1681.

De Hooch was one of the kindest and most charming painters of homely subjects that Holland has produced. All his paintings that have survived are small. The only large canvas that he ever painted was destroyed in the fire of Rotterdam in 1844. Sometimes he chose a drawing room with dancing cavaliers and ladies as his subjects, but he much preferred the homelier scenes, especially interiors illuminated by different intensities of light, and his special joy seems to have been in painting furniture.

Every day a different human interest story will appear in The Times. You can get a beautiful intaglio reproduction of this picture, with five others, equally attractive, 7 by 9 1/2 inches in size, with this week's "Mentor." In "The Mentor" a well known authority covers the subject of the pictures and stories of the week. Readers of The Times and "The Mentor" will know Art, Literature, History, Science, and Travel, and own exquisite pictures. On sale at The Times office. Price ten cents.
