

MARSHFIELD MAN IN COPPER MINE

J. W. BROWN, A CONTRACTOR, FINDS A BRIDE AND A GOOD INVESTMENT IN EUREKA, CALIFORNIA—HE WILL INTEREST HIMSELF IN MINE.

The following from a recent issue of the Humboldt Times will be of interest in Marshfield:

J. W. Brown, a contractor and builder of Marshfield, Oregon, who came here last week to take unto himself a bride and who remained long enough to become interested in the Horse Mountain copper mines, returned Saturday from a visit to the mountain, highly enthusiastic over what he had seen and determined to become a heavy purchaser of stock. With his wife, on Thursday, he will sail for Marshfield and as soon as several contracts there are completed, about three weeks hence, will return here.

Brown has been engaged in contracting and building for many years and during the past 13 years has superintended the construction of ore mills in many mining camps in Oregon and in all parts of Idaho. He has investigated scores of mining propositions and thoroughly understands conditions pertaining to the mining business.

Speaking of the Horse Mountain Copper Mining company's mines Brown stated last evening they formed the finest proposition that he had ever seen, and that this was the first proposition he had ever investigated that had not been exaggerated. He found that the Horse Mountain mines had been greatly underestimated, that the half of their value had not been told.

Brown spent three days on the trip to the mines. While on the mountain he traced out the porphyry dike for over five miles, on an air line finding it in place and without a break. The quartzite dikes were also found in place. Brown stated the first thing he did in investigating a mine was to see that the porphyry was in place and if it was, that he was satisfied everything else was all so. He stated emphatically that the Horse Mountain was in place without the question of a doubt.

remarking upon the immense amount of ore on the surface, Brown stated he was positive there were large ore bodies beneath the surface and spoke of extracting native copper from ore taken from Tunnel No. 6, 500 feet below the surface and 1000 feet in. It is from this tunnel that the ore is now being taken which supplies the large ore mill and concentrating plant.

In addition to his enthusiasm over the ore bodies, Brown spoke very favorably of the improvements made on the mountain. He was particularly impressed with the road leading to the mines and also with the large amount of development work done in the way of driving tunnels, opening cuts, etc.

Brown was asked to visit the mine by a friend, H. L. Getchel, and at first demurred as he had visited so many mines that had proven disappointments. After making the trip, however, he expressed himself as determined to purchase a large block of stock and to recommend the investment to his friends.

PENSION LAW BREAKS.

Peculiarities of Applications for State Aid for Mothers.

PORTLAND, Ore., June 16.—Some peculiar phases are already developing under the new widows' pension law which went into effect in this state early this month. In Multnomah county 82 applications were received during the first week. One of the applicants was a woman 65 years of age who had legally adopted her grandchild, aged 3 1/2 years. The case has been referred to District Attorney Evans for an opinion as to the eligibility of such cases. Two other applicants there are Chinese women. One of these sets forth the claim that she is the widow of two different Chinamen. If these women were born in the United States they would probably be entitled to pensions. In Douglas county but few applications have been filed, so far, for widows' pensions—not more than six or eight. Many more are expected, however. The County Court will not act on them until the regular July term.

Twenty-three years ago 1.37 inches was reported. According to Observer Mize at the local weather bureau, the average since January 1, to date is .73 inch above normal.

No. 2. PLACE DE LA BASTILLE.

Copyright, 1913, by The Associated Newspaper School, Inc.

THE commandant climbed fiercely up the stair, stepped out upon the platform of the tower that overlooked the wall, and gazed intently to the north. He listened, too, but for a moment or two his own heartbeats and the sound of his breathing was all that he could hear. Then there grew upon his sense the sound of a low, sullen roar. It rose and fell, but prison the unfortunate victims here, and few were those who ever again saw the sunlight. Thus the Bastille became the terror of the people of France.

On this fair morning in July, 1789, rumors of attack by the royal troops had set the people wild, and armed with every sort of weapon they marched upon the impregnable prison. The garrison within could see them approach, take aim at the loopholes and fire. One of the garrison was killed, but when the soldiers fired the scythe, Some of the soldiers, sick at seeing their countrymen murdered, called upon the governor to surrender. The latter, realizing that his cruelty had made him hated by the people, determined to die, but to take the mob into eternity with him. Seizing a torch he rushed into the powder magazine. He was caught just in time by the soldiers, and with a musket at his head ordered the draw-bridge lowered.

Then was let loose the hatred that had been growing in the people's hearts for centuries. The garrison was slaughtered and the prisoners freed. But nothing would do less than the destruction of the place itself, and for a whole year an army of men, women and children toiled upon the shrinking walls of this symbol of despotic power. It was leveled to the ground, and now only a line of white stones in the pavement shows where it stood. This open space is called the Place de la Bastille. In its center is a fine shaft 154 feet high, the "Column of July," built to commemorate the heroes of the Revolution of 1830. The remains of those who fell in this, and also the revolution of 1848, are contained in an immense sarcophagus within its base.

Every day a different human interest story will appear in The Times. You can get a beautiful intaglio reproduction of this picture, with five others, equally attractive, 7 by 9 1/2 inches in size, with this week's "Mentor." A Worker Appreciates This. Wm. Norris, a resident of Florence, Ore., says: "For the last 4 years my kidneys and bladder incapacitated me for all work. About eight months ago I began using Foley Kidney Pills, and they have done what other medicines failed to do, and now I am feeling fine. I recommend Foley Kidney Pills." Owl Prescription Pharmacy, Frank D. Cohan, Opposite Chandler Hotel, Phone 74.

Hot Water Instantly Any Minute in the Year

Hot water is even more important in the summer time than it is in the winter. Perhaps your house heating system has provision for heating water in the winter—but what do you do in the summer? Must the housewife depend upon such insufficient quantities of hot water as can be heated on the kitchen range? It is exasperating to her—and the men feel the inconvenience when in a hurry they find no hot water to shave or bathe.

Even in winter most househeating systems are unable to supply an adequate amount of hot water at all times—and in summer—range water heating is decidedly uneconomical and a source of trouble and vexation.

Eliminate these annoyances by getting a gas water heater. The cost of operation is small and the first cost ranges from $10.00 to $75.00. Telephone 178.
