ON THE TRAIL OF BANK ROBBER

YOUTHFUL GLENDALE BANDIT NOW IN HIDING IN THE HILLS OF CURRY COUNTY.

GLENDALE, Ore., June 18.—A telephone message from the Benton mines, on Whiskey Creek, about 2 1/2 miles west of Glendale, Wednesday was to the effect that Ray Diamond, the youthful desperado who on Monday held up Cashier Smith, of the Glendale State Bank, and secured funds amounting to $2,800 spent an hour yesterday noon with employees of the Benton mine.

Diamond arrived at the Benton mines at about 12 o'clock, according to the message, and for more than an hour he sat on a log with rifle in hand. The rifle was cocked, say the miners, and was in readiness for action. The employees of the mine had been notified of Diamond's crime, but on account of being without weapons they made no attempt to place him under arrest. The miners are acquainted with Diamond and conversed with him for more than an hour. Before departing from the mine Diamond inquired the most direct route to Gold Beach. He was informed regarding the trails and departed from the Benton mines shortly after two o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

Sheriff Quine has informed the Gold Beach officers, and a number of deputy sheriffs have been stationed on the various trails leading into that locality. Diamond has friends in Curry county, and in the event he reaches Gold Beach he will likely receive protection. Sheriff Quine, accompanied by a representative of the Burns detective agency, and several men well acquainted with the mountain districts, will leave here tonight for West Fork. From there they will follow the mountain trail along Whiskey Creek and in a westerly direction as far as Gold Beach. With Sheriff Quine and his assistants following the fugitive from West Fork and the Gold Beach officers working over the trails from that place, it appears likely that the desperado will be intercepted.

Diamond's procedure in visiting the Benton mines leads the officers to believe that he is not experienced in crime, and that he will be captured. It is argued that desperadoes usually refrain from intercepting camps and other settlements and thereby place the officers in the dark. In visiting the Benton mines Diamond has reversed the usual procedure, and has given the officers a clew which may lead to his capture.

The Benton mine is located about 2 1/2 miles west of Glendale. In the thickly timbered districts. The trails leading from there are rugged, and are difficult to travel.

Sheriff Quine returned to Roseburg last night, and immediately set to work notifying the officers throughout southern Oregon and the coast regions regarding the supposed route taken by Diamond in his effort to make his "get-away." Sheriff Quine believes that Diamond has a cache in the mountains west of Glendale and that he will remain in hiding until such time as the search is partially abandoned. At that time he will probably follow one of the mountain trails and emerge from the timber in the vicinity of Gold Beach, Curry county, or along the Rogue river in southern Oregon.

It was learned today that Diamond formerly mingled with a number of Indians now occupying a settlement in Curry county, and it may be possible that he will proceed to that part of the country.

Mr. Howard, of Glendale, appears to scout the theory that Diamond intends to make his get-away and maintains that he will sooner or later return to Glendale to seek advice from his father. Upon what grounds Mr. Howard bases this theory, neither the officers nor newspaper men were able to ascertain.

People who know Diamond declare that he is desperate, and that he has planned the robbery for months. As a result they say it is sheer folly to even think that he will return to Glendale. While Mr. Howard says the officials of the bank will refuse to prosecute the youth in the event of his capture, the officers say they will be only too glad to prosecute the boy in the event he should be located. The crime of which Diamond is guilty carries with it a life sentence—consequently it would be impossible for him to get off easy, or escape punishment altogether.

Sheriff Quine is determined to locate Diamond, and it might be said that the search has just commenced. At any rate, every officer in the entire Northwest has been notified and is at present on the lookout for the fugitive. That he will eventually be captured is the belief of those conversant with the case.

Trainer Pitcher, who spent yesterday at Glendale with his bloodhound, returned home last night.

Nothing Doing.

GLENDALE, Ore., June 18.—While several local persons ventured into the timbered districts west of Glendale today, no one has attempted to pursue Diamond, the youthful outlaw, who is at present making his way across the mountains with approximately $2800 belonging to the Glendale State Bank.

People here consider Diamond a dangerous character, and there are few who have the nerve to go in pursuit. The desperado is heavily armed, and it is believed that he will shoot anyone that may appear on sight. He knows the mountains of this locality, and is probably hiding until such time as he will be able to leave the country without fear of being detected.

Just why the officials of the Glendale State Bank are opposed to prosecuting Diamond in the event of his capture cannot be ascertained here today. It is believed, however, that the officers of the bank are more desirous of securing the money than the desperado.

A Burns detective arrived here this morning and spent the day preparing circulars containing a description of the fugitive. These circulars will be mailed to every officer on the coast. There are many residents of this city who believe that Diamond's nerve will fail him upon sighting a human being and that he will surrender without resistance. This theory is merely a conjecture, however, for there are others who claim he will battle until the last ditch.

It was practically established here today that Diamond is alone, and is not accompanied by a partner as intimated yesterday. The party whom the officers failed to find yesterday was located today and furnished conclusive evidence that he knew nothing of the crime until his arrival at Glendale today.

OFFERS TO CURE NUMEROUS.

Patent Medicine Concerns Beseiged Luther King.

FLORENCE, Or., June 20.—Luther King, who died here Wednesday, was taken during the last month of his life from Florence where he was cared for by Mr. Roth to the Glendale Hospital, the matron of which, after the account of King's strange malady in many state papers several weeks ago, received many letters from physicians and quack medicine concerns all over the country, declaring with traditional confidence that they could cure him.

King, even to the last, was willing to give them a trial, not because of any faith in their ability to help him, but because of a vain sporting tendency that characterized him—a bet that all the medicine they had could neither help nor harm him. He was vain of his malady and vainly still of its incurableness by any except supernatural means. In the same breath he invited the world to doctor him and defied the influence of its drugs. "They can't cure me," he used to say, "and they can't kill me, either. I've drunk strychnine; I've swallowed barrels of blood medicine; I've eat snake weed from India and blood medicine and strychnine had the same effect. I can't be hurt and I can't be helped."

It was a malady that he bore with fortitude, awaiting the time when the number of sores should equal the rattles of the snake that bit him. This strange correspondence and God were the only physicians in whom he had faith.

CURRY WOOL CROP IS BIG

Will Ship About 200,000 Pounds This Season—Price is 16 Cents per Pound.

Curry county's wool crop this year will exceed 200,000 pounds says W. O. Milne, a well known wool buyer, who has spent several weeks in that section arranging for the purchasing of the season's clip. The prevailing price this year was about sixteen cents. Last year, the price was about 21 1/2 cents per pound.

Mr. Milne says the clip will not be as large as was expected owing to the hard winter causing considerable loss of sheep. He says that many of the ranchers did not even attempt to save the pelts although these would have brought them $1 to $1.50 each.

Mr. Milne drove his Maxwell car up from Eureka and says that the road part way is in good shape but near Port Orford it is awful.

From here, Mr. Milne will go to the Siuslaw, probably taking his car to Drain via Allegheny and going from there.

Mr. Milne made the trip from here to Myrtle Point and return in his car at the rate of twenty-five miles per hour.

Mr. Milne says that he met one good old Democrat in Curry county. He didn't give his name but says he has a big drove of sheep. While dicker for the wool, he offered him sixteen cents per pound.

"That's too much," the rancher retorted. "These are Democratic times and we Democrats are pledged to reduce the high cost of living. I won't take more than ten cents a pound for that wool."

However, the party patriotism was sufficiently well grounded to prevent him settling with Mr. Milne on the basis of sixteen cents per pound and so another Democratic ambition is gone.

NEW RAILWAY MERGER PLAN

Great Systems Will be Made in Splitting Union Pacific and Southern Pacific.

(By Associated Press to Coos Bay Times.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 19.—E. H. Harriman's dream of a complete transcontinental railroad system will be doubly realized if the present plan to dissolve the Southern Pacific-Union Pacific merger is approved by the attorney general and the courts.

Under the present plan the Union Pacific will trade its dominating interest in the Southern Pacific to the Pennsylvania railroad, receiving in return the heavy holdings of the Pennsylvania in the Baltimore & Ohio system. This will mean the linking of eight railroad systems into two coast-to-coast lines with trackage as follows:

The New Union Pacific.		Mileage
Union Pacific	.....	6,991
Central Pacific	.....	1,527
Baltimore & Ohio	.....	8,774
Illinois Central	.....	4,764
Total	.....	22,055
The New Pennsylvania.		Mileage
Pennsylvania	.....	5,014
Norfolk & Western	.....	2,918
Atlantic Coast Line	.....	4,567
Louisville & Nashville	.....	7,947
Southern Pacific	.....	8,419
Total	.....	28,925

The Union Pacific already controls the Illinois Central and will continue to do so, it is understood, after the dissolution is completed. Also Union Pacific is to be given, according to present understanding, some sort of control of the Central Pacific. With all this worked out, the new Union Pacific would control:

California coast to Ogden, Central Pacific lines; North Pacific coast to Ogden, Oregon Short Line and Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation company; Ogden to Omaha and Kansas City, Union Pacific main line; Omaha to Chicago, Illinois Central; Chicago to the Atlantic seaboard, Baltimore & Ohio.

A greater system would be that produced by the linking of the Pennsylvania and the Southern Pacific. The Pennsylvania lines come to Washington, the Southern Pacific lines come to New Orleans. Unite them through the southern systems and the new and greater Pennsylvania system would gridiron the south, the east, the Ohio valley and the Pacific coast; extending from Portland, Ore., along the Pacific coast to San Francisco and Los Angeles, thence across California, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas to New Orleans, thence up through the south, to New York.
