American Sea Painters

“LEARN ONE THING EVERY DAY”

No. 2. PAUL DOUGHERTY, "The Inrush."

Copyright, 1913, by The Associated Newspaper School, Inc.

WHEN PAUL DOUGHERTY was old enough to choose a profession, he unhesitatingly expressed the desire to become a painter. But he thought he ought to have a good, solid foundation in an educational way; so he went to the Brooklyn Polytechnic, where he graduated at the early age of 19. He came, however, of an intellectual family, his father being one of the distinguished members of the Brooklyn bar, and his brother, Walter Hampden, an actor of international repute. Because his father wanted him to follow in his footsteps, Paul read law and took his degree of LL. B. at the New York Law School, becoming a member of the bar. Having done all this by 1898, he went abroad to see the art galleries of Europe, and immediately began to work at painting.

He studied alone, traveled extensively for five years, returned home and then opened a studio in New York. Before he was 30 years old he was a National Academician, and his pictures were instantly successful. One has to go back to Sir Thomas Lawrence, the great English artist, to find success at an equally early age. Although he began as a landscape painter, Dougherty soon turned his attention to marines, and by these he is better known. By these too, he is represented in the various galleries at Pittsburgh, Washington, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, (New York), the Brooklyn Museum of Art and Sciences, and elsewhere. He has won many medals, both at home and abroad. The coast of Maine has furnished him with material, particularly the Island of Monhegan, just off Boothbay Harbor, where many of his most important pictures have been painted. He has also worked along the Cornish coast in England, at the painters' colony at Saint Ives, and is a member of many art organizations, as well as of the National Institute of Arts and Letters.

Tall and broad-shouldered, Dougherty has enormous physical activity and energy and is a constant worker. In New York he occupies a large studio apartment in one of the co-operative buildings, where he has a wealth of artistic things he has picked up all over the world. He is a constant attendant at the many musical happenings that take place in the metropolis. His studio is a gathering place for musicians on Sunday afternoons. There throughout the winter may be found many persons well known in the musical and artistic world. At the first sign of spring, however, Dougherty is off for the sea, not to return until driven in by the winter's cold, and he always comes back with a mass of material for subsequent pictures.

Every day a different human interest story will appear in The Times. You can get a beautiful intaglio reproduction of this picture, with five others, equally attractive, 7 by 9 1/2 inches in size, with this week's "Mentor." In "The Mentor" a well known authority covers the subject of the pictures and stories of the week. Readers of The Times and "The Mentor" will know Art, Literature, History, Science, and Travel, and own exquisite pictures. On sale at The Times office. Price ten cents. Write today to The Times for booklet explaining The Associated Newspaper School plan.

DOES NOT FEAR 13.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 7.—President Wilson's declaration that the generally supposed hoodoo "13" was his lucky number and always had been, was recalled by society today in connection with the announcement of the engagement of Miss Jessie Wilson, second daughter of the President and Mrs. Wilson, to Francis B. Sayre, of Lancaster, Pa. The influence of the President's lucky "13" it is believed extends to the entire Wilson family. For Miss Wilson, engaged in 1913 and to become a matron in 1913, will be the "13th" White House bride.

SCREEN DOORS USELESS.

Fly-Fighter Tells Eugene People to Kill Insects.

Declaring Eugene to be an exceptionally clean city, and complimenting it for the recent ordinance for the prevention of flies, Clifton Fremont Hodge, said to be the greatest authority upon the extermination of flies in this country, and noted the nation over for his discoveries, spoke well of Eugene and its healthful conditions at the first of a series of public lectures at the University. Professor Hodge, who comes from Clark University, is one of the leading physiologists in this country. It was he who originated the anti-fly crusades in the east, and for several years he has made a complete study of the fly problem.

Screen doors, he said, are useless—a waste of money for which the American people pay $12,500,000 annually. It is easier, he states, to be rid of the flies than to put up screens. He has invented traps with which he has actually caught bushels of flies in an incredibly short time.

Professor Hodge explained the methods of catching flies. He said that he became interested in the problem when he sought to catch flies to feed chickens, which he was caring for. He found that he could completely rid the vicinity of them in a short time. The reproduction of the fly is enormous. One fly lays hundreds of eggs seven or eight times a year. The total offspring from one fly-family run into the thousands of bushels. Thus Professor Hodge emphasized the necessity for anti-fly crusades early in the season. A trap he considers the best method of catching them. He has invented traps which fit in the windows of stables where flies breed, which catch them before they lay their eggs. He has another trap which has been built onto a garbage can. But another efficient method to rid them, other than by actually swatting them, is to place a five per cent solution of formalin in a saucer.

SENTENCE IS ENFORCED.

Hyde and Snyder, Oregon Land Fraudsters, Must Go to Prison.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 5.—Federick H. Hyde and J. H. Schneider, convicted here in December, 1908, of land frauds in California and Oregon, must begin serving their prison sentences. Attorney General McReynolds ordered the Supreme Court's mandate handed down to the District of Columbia courts for enforcement of the sentence.

Both President Taft and President Wilson denied clemency. Hyde got two years and a fine of $10,000. Schneider got 14 months and a fine of $1000.

THE DEMOCRACY OF DEATH

By Dr. Frank Crane.

Nowhere does convention lay its paralyzing hand upon poor mortals so hardly as at the funeral.

A man can live as independently as he pleases, wear a soft shirt, eat with his knife and refuse to go to receptions, and altogether imagine that he is an individual, but when he dies, custom with iron hand and velvet glove invades his house and takes charge.

The great high priestess of funerals is Mrs. Grundy. The sensitive, torn hearts of the family shrink from any sort of conflict, and so they submit to the absurd, expensive and vulgar things that make of the funeral a horror.

The widow is anxious that all respect be shown. Hence she submits to the extortions of the funeral director and consents to the purchase of a casket that costs six times what it is worth and ten times what she can afford.

Why should people who never ride in carriages in their lifetime be made to pay for carriages for all the relatives and friends out of the insurance money that belongs to the widow and children?

A decent respect for the dead and for the opinion of our neighbors demands that there be some ceremony, as solemn, as reverential as can be made. But above all things, their rites should be purged of display, extravagance and show. They should be simple, heartfelt and genuine.

It is not the money spent that matters so much. In our grief we care nothing for that, and only wish we could squander millions if by so doing we could show the depth of our sorrow. But that is precisely the point of error; for the expenditure of money does not express grief. It expresses pride: it is a disposition to make a show which is entirely out of place.

The grief of bereavement is essentially private and shrinking. A funeral should be an affair of the utmost privacy and simplicity. That, of all places, is no place to parade.

And what a spectacle is the modern graveyard, with its distinctions of rich and poor more sharply marked than among the living. By all means let a man live in a palace if he chooses, but why should he wish to project the class lines of wealth into that region where riches and poverty are no more? At least the realm of death is a democracy. At least in "God's Acre" men ought to be willing to lie still in bare manhood, all together in their investment of clay, equal at last, prince and pauper, there where there is no more

"The hoast of heraldry.

"The pomp of power."

If we can have no real democracy while we are alive, at least permit us to have the democracy of death.

SHOCKING FRAUD.

The latest fraud some of the Bandon ladies are perpetrating on their dearest enemies is wearing sand paper sewed to their stockings in order to make those envious believe the rasping swish is caused by silk petticoats.

DAILY RIDDLES.
