HOW TO CARE FOR DOG BITE

Oregon State Board of Health Gives Instructions About Dealing With Wounds.

DOG IS ALL RIGHT.
Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Meeks, whose dog bit Mrs. Chas. E. Seafuse, say the animal is perfectly docile and has not exhibited any indications of rabies or any other disease. The Spitz is a great pet and he bit Mrs. Seafuse while she was playing with him.

PORTLAND, Or., July 18.—Joseph Norton, proprietor of the Olympia hotel, Sixth and Irving streets, received word from Marshfield that his daughter, Mrs. Charles Seafuse, had been bitten by a pet dog one week ago. Although the wound has been cauterized three times it is still causing some trouble.

In view of the recent cases of hydrophobia in this city Norton requested his daughter to come here immediately for the Pasteur treatment.

In a recent bulletin issued by the Oregon state board of health, the following advice is given in case of a dog bite:

"The wound should be immediately cauterized with nitric acid and dressed antiseptically. If the wound is deep, involving the perosteum or the eye, it should be washed with a bichloride of mercury solution.

"As the organism causing the disease is probably a protozoan, theoretically a saturated solution of quinine would be an ideal dressing. However, this is purely problematical. The patient is advised not to depend on peroxide or turpentine.

"The board also recommends that the animal should never be killed, but should be confined in some enclosure and kept in confinement for a definite length of time. If the animal does not show any symptoms of rabies after being confined for a week or ten days the matter may be dismissed. If the dog is rabid it will certainly die.

Save Dog's Brain.
"In killing an animal it is suggested that it be killed in such a manner as not to destroy the brain, which should be preserved. After the animal is dead its head should be separated from the body and sent to the state board of health for examination.

"Upon receiving a report that in the brain has been found positive evidence of rabies the person bitten should immediately report to the state board of health for treatment.

"The symptoms of rabies first manifest themselves in a change in the dog's disposition. Usually it becomes more sullen and exhibits a restless spirit, wandering away from home. It also shows a tendency to snap and bite anything that moves. Other symptoms are a change of voice, refusing food and usually drink, but attempting to eat indigestible things like stones, leather, dirt, etc. During the early stages of the disease a rabid dog can drink water and the word hydrophobia is really a misnomer.

Symptoms of Rabies.
"A rabid dog does not froth at the mouth and does not always have fits.

"Setting a pan of water in front of him and expecting, as is the popular belief, that he will 'throw a fit' for diagnostic purposes, is an error. These are symptoms of furious rabies.

"In dumb rabies the lower jaw is paralyzed early and drops down.

"The animal acts as though it had a foreign body in its throat and persons are frequently inoculated in an attempt to remove an imaginary bone from the dog's throat.

"The animal will also show a tendency to tremor with a possible blindness of the right eye and gradually increasing paralysis, usually beginning in the left hind leg and becoming total and ending in death.

"The symptoms in all other animals are somewhat similar.

"The period that a dog with rabies will live varies from 48 hours to nine days."
