No. 5. JOHN SMITH.

ARMED and feet bound with buckskin thongs, the prisoner showed no trace of fear. The clear gray eyes, set in his bronzed face, watched with apparent unconcern the grunting savages quit their council and approach him with the grin of fierce satisfaction on their faces. Nor did he wince when each savage as he passed cut him with a stinging lash. But now the last moment had come. Tomahawk in hand, the chief warrior came over to the kneeling Englishman, while the surrounding warriors watched for a sign of weakening. The hatchet was raised; the kneeling man was inwardly bidding farewell to the fair world about him. Suddenly, quick as a panther, there sprang through the circle of Indians the chief's daughter. She threw herself upon the captive's neck and talked in her soft gutters fast and vehemently. Her plea was successful; for the tomahawk was lowered and the captive freed. Thus, according to the oft told story, did Pocahontas save the life of John Smith, captain and governor of the colony of Virginia.

Born in 1579, John Smith was the eldest son of a tenant farmer in Lincolnshire, England, and early showed a love for adventure. He made a trip to France, became a soldier under Henry IV. of that country, and then to Holland. Returning he erected a hut of boughs near a pretty stream in the country and stayed there reading the art of war and the essays of Marcus Aurelius. Then along came a man who fired his desire to war against the Turks. Starting for Rome, he was thrown into the sea as a heretic by the pilgrims on board, but managed to swim to an uninhabited island, whence he was rescued next day by a vessel bound for Egypt. He finally reached Hungary and entered the emperor's service against the Turks. In the presence of both armies, as a champion of the Christians, he beheaded three Turks in one day. In 1602 he was left wounded on the field, captured, and sent to Constantinople as a slave. There a princess fell in love with him. Fearing her mother's vengeance against Smith, she sent him to her brother Timor, in Tataria. Timor, suspecting the truth, put irons on him, clothed him in hair cloth, and made him a slave in his harvest field.

One day the Englishman slew Timor, put on his clothes, hid the body, mounted his horse, and escaped, coming at last to Germany, where the Prince of Hungary met him and rewarded him for his feat against the Turks. Thence he wandered through Germany, France, Spain, Morocco, and back to England. In 1606, with three vessels and 105 men, he set out to establish a colony in Virginia, where Raleigh's colonies had perished. The little fleet was blown into Chesapeake Bay, and finally found the James River. Jamestown was founded May 13, 1607. Privations followed—food was scarce, Indians menaced sickness appeared. Smith was everywhere, hunting, fighting with the Indians, bartering for food. New colonists coming, plotted against his life. In his boat asleep, they set fire to his powder. He was terribly burned, and jumping into the water was nearly drowned. He was sent home in 1609, and never returned. When contemplating a history of the sea, Smith died in 1632 and was buried in St. Sepulchre's, London.

No. 6. MYLES STANDISH.

"So I have come to you now, with an offer and proffer of marriage. Made by a good man and true, Myles Standish, the Captain of Plymouth." HOW the bluff, bluish, captain of Plymouth, who was not afraid of bullets, but could not face the "no" from a woman, forgot his own adage, "If you wish a thing to be well done, you must do it yourself; you must not leave it to others;" how he sent his good young friend, John Alden, to ask Priscilla the all important question, "Why don't you speak for yourself, John?"—these are the familiar things associated with the name of Myles Standish, even though historians say that there is no foundation for the truth of this incident in the life of Standish.

However this may be, the bluff captain has attained wider fame through Longfellow's poem, "The Courtship of Myles Standish," than through anything he did in the way of exploration, and he will doubtless continue to be known in this way. Myles Standish was born in Lancashire in 1584, had some experience in the wars in Holland, and was 36 years old, with his wife Anne, sailed in the Mayflower for America. Soon after landing at Plymouth, Standish became the military captain of the colony. He had command of the little army, and kept a sharp watch on the Indians. On one occasion when the Indians had conspired to massacre the English their plan was discovered, and Standish with his men, killed them with the very weapons they had brought to use against the colonists. In 1625 he went to London to endeavor to secure the intervention of the council for New England in the affairs of the colony. This mission failed.

He fought the Indians on several occasions, and by his expeditions to keep them friendly or to punish them, became familiar with the surrounding country. In 1628 he pledged himself, in common with seven other members of the colony, to pay $10,000 to buy out the merchant adventurers who controlled the colony. Eleven years after landing Standish removed with William Brewster and settled at Duxbury, where he spent the remainder of his life, dying in 1656.

On Captain's Hill, near the old home at Duxbury, is a tall shaft, rising 110 feet, in memory of the old leader, while a bronze statue of him stands nearby.

THREE SENT TO COUNTY JAIL

ROSEBURG, Or., July 21.—Following the returning of an indictment, Alac Matson, Oscar Limber and Alfred Batman, appeared in the circuit court, and through their attorney, George Jones, entered pleas of guilty. They were fined $50, and without funds to pay the assessment will be compelled to spend the next 25 days in the county jail. The charge was that of assault and battery.

The facts connected with the trouble were related to the court by both Attorney George Jones and District Attorney George M. Brown. During the progress of Attorney Jones' explanation he chanced to mention that the men were intoxicated at the time of the trouble. The liquor responsible for the condition of the men, Attorney Jones intimated was purchased from Franklin, the prosecuting witness.

Judge Hamilton grasped this statement quickly and remarked: "Well, Franklin must be selling liquor."

District Attorney Brown explained the trouble from the time it started in the resort of Bert Roberts until it ended in the establishment of Edward Franklin. He simply told of how the men came to Gardner from a railroad construction camp for a good time, and of how they later visited the several resorts and caused the trouble for which they were arrested. The district attorney appeared to think Matson was more to blame than the others on account of the fact that he could talk English and was conversant with the ways of the country.

Judge Hamilton took the view that all three of the men were equally guilty, however, and pronounced sentences accordingly.

LIBRARY NOTES.

The library needs a new apprentice. Anyone wanting to learn to do library work, please apply at the library.

The women's clubs of this city who would like to have a collection of books on some special subject will please leave word also at the library. Such a special collection can be obtained from the Oregon State Library as a loan. The only expense connected with it would be the freight from and to Salem. Material of this kind would have a special place in the library and would be used only by the club to which it belonged. Some of the subjects are "Racial Types of Drama," "Modern Drama Beginning with the Nineteenth Century," "Recent Successful Plays," "Domestic Economy," "Europe," "Japan," etc. The collections of books include also an outline on the year's work.

It has been suggested by one of the missionary societies of Marshfield that the different missionary societies of the town club together and buy the Missionary Review, which is $2.15 for a new subscription. This, divided among the different churches, would make a contribution from each of less than 50 cents. The periodical could be kept in the library where it would be accessible to everyone and the back numbers could be circulated like a book.

The St. Louis Public Library has just circulated a booklet entitled, "Books I Like and Why I Like Them." These are written by 29 different people concerning their favorite books. Some of the books mentioned, which we have also in our library, are given below, also the reasons why the reader liked each:

Ruskin, Modern Painters. The most gorgeous word-painting ever achieved by stringing together English syllables.

Dickens, Charles. Tale of Two Cities.—Though Dickens' delicious humor is greatly missing in this book, to my mind it is the most dramatic, powerful thing he ever wrote. He seems to have absorbed the troublesome spirit of the times; his gressome Madame LaFarge has become a living personality and stands for the horror of the Revolution, while Sidney Carton is a type of the many heroes of the Terror.

Galworthy, The Patrician. Of rare beauty and finish of workmanship—a subtle criticism of the modern British aristocracy and a prophecy of its passing.

The library is in the Coke building opposite the Chandler Hotel. It is open from 10 to 12 a. m., from 2 to 6 and 7 to 9 p. m., all days but Sundays and holidays.

DOGS ARE POISONED.

E. R. Miller of Curry County, Victim of Meanness.

A few days ago E. R. Miller had the misfortune to lose all of his trained varmint dogs; four in all by poison at the hands of some unknown culprit. The poison was strewn along the trail between Mr. Miller's home place and his First Prairie ranch.

This is a heavy loss to Mr. Miller and what is even worse is the dread of heavier and greater losses from the same source. His first loss was a cabin at Rock Prairie burned, now the dogs killed and God only knows what next will happen to him.—Gold Beach Globe.
