Fears Rabies .- C. N. Coombs. chief operator at the Cape Blanco wireless station, has gone to Portland to take the Pasteur treatment for rabies. His pet Scotch Collie went mad and in handling him some of the froth from the dog's mouth got on his hands, which were badly scratched and as he feared possible infection, he started at once to see experts. The dog was killed.

Has Hard Time .- P. A. McNabb, who is living on Isthmus Inlet now, was in Marshfield yesterday and reports an unusual streak of hard luck. Their young son suffered an attack of bloodpoisoning and has not recovered from it yet. Mrs. McNabb, while caring for him spilled some boiling water in her shoe, blistering her foot. In some manner, the wound became infected from her son. This was scarcely cured until she infected an injury to her hand and she is now recovering from that. Their son is slowly improving, but it is feared that the bone has been infected. Mrs. McNabb's mother is here from near Roseburg to visit them. Dal Cathcart recalled yesterday that he had attended the marriage of the latter nearly fifty years ago and says that the last time he met her, a number of years ago, she was rejoicing over the fact that she had twenty grandchildren, ten boys and ten girls, and was only sixty years old.
