SUMMER'S PASSING.

WHILE the residents of this fair and favored section know the torrid tropic heat of the East and Middle West, and the seasons here meet, melt and merge into each other so that the line of demarcation is but faintly traced, yet to the observant there is always evidence of the summer's passing. And while we welcome the approaching autumn, there is a sense of pathos at the going of the season of beach picnics and river outings. A rich, golden, blossomy season, the summer even on Coos Bay, possesses its own potent charm somehow embodied in its deep blue skies, its indolent breezes and its beguiling fragrance.

With the passing of summer there is a sudden, almost sentient atmosphere of culmination and withdrawal. Twilight comes early, with a pensive afterglow. Shadows deepen under the tree tops, the sunlight grows ruddy and the purple hills are less remote. Thistle down floats over the sleeping meadows and feathery banks of golden rod drift under hedge rows and in the hazy hollows.

A renewed activity awakens in city streets and country lanes and grass-grown farm yards. The brisk energy of autumn is already stirring. August has merged into September—tawny without the blight of frost, and on the hills is a mist of tears where the dying summer lingers. Like a spirit of joy that has burned itself out like a waning moon or a flickering candle—there is something exquisitely touching in the silent spectacle of summer's passing.

WITH THE TOAST AND THE TEA

PRACTICAL HERO.

He was a valiant lifeguard
 That watched beside the sea,
 And from the deep
 He'd saved a heap
 Of foolish folk, had he!

He was a valiant lifeguard
 That made this strange lament:
 "The girls I save
 From that damp grave
 Don't dig up nary cent!"

"They're sometimes young and pretty,
 But, stranger, what's the use?
 Some offer free
 To marry me,
 But coin their don't produce!"

"They send a bunch of medals,
 An' tokens, an' such truck,
 An' words o' praise,
 But never raise
 A solitary buck."

"I got a wife an' children
 An' earn three bones a day,
 This hero stuff
 Is well enough,
 But what I want is pay!"

"Never put the cart before the horse," remarked Will Ekblad in a philosophic mood.
 "You mean never put the smell before the automobile," corrected Frank Hague, who is always up-to-date and a little ahead.

If those Bandon carnival boosters wanted to make a real hit they should have had a slit skirt race as one of their attractions.

Will Chandler entered the Owl yesterday afternoon and bought a couple of cigars. He lighted one.
 "Lord, this is a rotten cigar," he screamed.

"Say, man, what are you complaining about?" Frank Cohan replied. "You have only a couple of those cigars and I have a thousand. Be reasonable."

"I see you are back from your Curry County outing." Russ Tower remarked to John Goss.
 "That's a good name for it," John replied. "I am 'out' about forty dollars."

THE QUIET OBSERVER SAYS

"Life is a moving picture, and the film often breaks at the interesting place."

"Health is wealth," quoted Dorsey Kreitzer.
 "Oh, not it isn't," replied Dr. Houseworth, "not for me."

Some Coos Bay men who are as good as their word are not worth the price of a dog license.

That Coos Bay Smile a Winner

"I'll Wear That Coos Bay Smile"

Words by R. O. Graves. Music by Prof. Harry E. Leppert.

I. I am traveling towards the setting sun,
 To a place where mankind's work is just begun—
 It's a land whose summer skies,
 Make the buds bloom with surprise—
 It's a land where Nature smiles, and says, "Well done."
 CHORUS.

Coos Bay! Coos Bay! That's where I am going;
 Coos Bay! Coos Bay! Where cool winds are blowing;
 When I get there, after 'while—
 Live all year in pomp and style—
 While you're knowing that its snowing,
 I will wear that Coos Bay Smile.

II. It's a land where ocean breezes fan to flame,
 All the best that's in the man who seeks for fame—
 There is good, old sturdy health,
 For the man who's seeking wealth—
 In this empire where men's chances are the same.

III. Come and go with me where ev'ry thing is best,
 For the man who's struggled hard with plague and pest—
 Come and view that pleasant land,
 Where the people have the "sand"—
 And ambition grows in ev'ry manly breast.

THAT Coos Bay Smile won its way to the hearts of a representative Coos Bay audience at the Orpheum last evening. There was a large attendance of the leading business and professional men of the city and the new song was greeted with hearty applause.

It was also a triumph for the singer, Miss Ada Miller, as well as for the song. Miss Miller shared honors with the composer, Prof. Harry E. Leppert, and with R. O. Graves, the author of the boosting ditty that sings the praise of Coos Bay in fitting measure. Miss Miller has a strong, sweet soprano voice and during the many weeks of her appearance at this popular house she has won a host of friends by her clever rendition of popular songs and old-time favorites. She never sang in better voice or with a more sympathetic audience than last evening and the applause was genuine and generous.

Miss Miller closes her engagement at the Orpheum with a farewell appearance Wednesday evening and leaves Thursday for her home in Salem, where she will resume her musical studies.

Congratulations were numerous for the author, R. O. Graves; Prof. Harry E. Leppert, and the singer, Miss Ada Miller and for the Orpheum management, for having secured such a splendid feature.

The song will be repeated at the Orpheum tonight.

SURPRISE PARTY.

A delightful surprise party was given on Saturday evening, August 30, in honor of Mrs. J. R. Dodge, of Smith-Powers Camp 1, on South Coos River. Mrs. Dodge left on this morning's auto to visit her mother at Roseburg. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. B. Lattin, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Linquist, Mrs. Wm. Wakeman, Misses Adelaide and Virdress, though possibly they were becoming a little too common.

"A fellow and a girl can be engaged for seven years, but they never get acquainted until they have been married for seven days."

Before he gets her he would wipe his face on the ground she walks on. After he gets her he gets mad if he is asked to dry his face on the same towel she used.

If a girl has a pretty profile it is a sign she gets her picture taken that way.

ginia Clarke, Frank and Roy Wakeman, Chauncey Clarke, Ernest Miller and Wm. Montgomery.

The evening was spent at cards and music. Mr. Montgomery delighted the guests with several choice selections on the violin. Refreshments were served at 12 o'clock.

MISS ROOD LEAVES.

Miss Mildred E. Rood, of North Bend, has announced to her large music class in North Bend and Marshfield, that she will shortly relinquish her work here to leave for Northwestern University in Chicago to continue her studies in the conservatory of that institution. Miss Rood graduated from the North Bend High School with the class of 1909 and that fall entered Albany College where she completed the two-year conservatory course in piano. For the last two years Miss Rood has been teaching the largest music class on the Bay and has resided in North Bend. The course planned at Northwestern will cover the work of two years and will include part of the regular studies in liberal arts usually taken toward the A. B. degree.

The departure of Miss Rood for college will increase the already unusually large number of Coos Bay young people in college this year, and while it is with genuine regret that her many music students and friends on the Bay let her go, they will follow her work in the East with interest and will anticipate her return to her classes after two years' music study in Chicago.

LUKE M'LUKE SAYS:

No matter how old a woman may grow nor how hopeless her case, she always wants to stop in front of a millinery window and admire the hats.

The trouble with telling a white lie is that you have to repeat it so often that it turns black.

Every thin woman likes to believe that she has a broad outlook.

Silt trousers for men are nothing new. After a man has been married long enough he is afraid to talk off his coat.
