LUMBER AND PANAMA CANAL.

THE TIMES prints an interesting and encouraging interview with Mr. C. A. Smith in another column. His views of the highly probable beneficial effect of the opening of the Panama Canal on the lumber trade, are a result of careful consideration. Such a result means much for Coos Bay. That this section has suffered no deleterious effects from the continued dullness of the lumber trade for the past four years may be attributed largely to the highly efficient organization of the C. A. Smith Company and the modern methods and equipment of the Smith mill.

That there is agreement with Mr. Smith's view of the effect on the lumber trade of the opening of the canal is shown by the following from a Portland paper:

"The opening of the canal is very likely to mean much to the lumber industry. Indeed it may entirely relieve the existing dullness and convert it again into a very profitable business."

"It is believed that passengers may be landed through the canal on the Pacific Coast in ten days after they leave New York. It will, therefore, be no terrific undertaking to land Pacific Coast lumber on the Atlantic Coast. The cost, it is believed, will not be more than $8 to $10 a thousand. If, through this means, a profitable market is opened for the least desirable remnants of the lumber which is now too often practically sacrificed, it will mean great things and big profits to the lumber industry."

"The lumber business up to date is the backbone of our commercial life. When it is being conducted at a loss everybody feels it. Transform that condition into one of widely extending trade and fruitful profits and poor times immediately become good times."

"This prospective Atlantic trade is receiving a good deal of attention from the active men in the business, and it would surprise most of them if it should not prove the trade stimulant they have had for many a year."

Even with the aid of a mirror a Coos Bay woman is unable to see herself as others see her.

"If she will provide for the inner man he will provide for the outer woman."

TO FILE GOOD ROAD PETITION

Request for Special Election Will be Taken up at Coquille Tomorrow.

(Special to The Times.) COQUILLE, Ore., Nov. 5.—The Coos County Good Roads Association today will file the petitions to the Coos County Court asking that a special election be called in the near future to vote on a $440,000 bond issue to build good roads. No date is specified in the petitions and the Court will determine the date at their meeting tomorrow. Relative to rumors about the $440,000 being apportioned by agreement or petition to certain districts or stretches of road, the County Court states that it cannot be done. The money will have to be divided as the statute provides.
