RADIUM CURE FOR CANCERS

Large Doses of Radium Have Cured Dread Disease, But Small Ones Fail.

[By Associated Press to Coos Bay Times.] CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—The scarcity of radium has prevented a thorough test of what its curative properties may be in cancer, according to the report made in the Clinical Congress of Surgeons in session here by the cancer campaign committee. The committee organized to combat cancer by spreading information leading to early treatment of the disease as soon as it manifests itself, reported on the educational campaign of the past year, carried on by the American Society for the control of cancer.

"Only time will tell what percentage of cases can be cured with radium," the report states. "In the meantime the public should be informed through every possible source that early surgical treatment offers the best chance for cure. The surgeons who have reported the best results from radium still urge early operation whenever possible. "Few surgeons in this country have enough radium to give it a thorough trial. It has appeared that extensive doses have sometimes cured when smaller amounts have little effect. It is suggested that radium should be standardized to eliminate variations in its strength."

Popular articles in magazines, published through newspapers, in factories and elsewhere, have been effective throughout the year in spreading information on cancer. Present death statistics on the scourge are of questionable value, it is said. Frederick L. Hoffman of Newark, N. J., declared that discussions of whether cancer is on the increase at present were merely guesswork. "Seventy-five thousand persons in the United States will die of cancer in 1913," said Mr. Hoffman. The death rate is 8.6 per cent of the total mortality for persons over 45. However, statistics may reflect merely better diagnosis and death registration and it is not worth while arguing if cancer is on the increase until we have a complete and accurate report. Importance of early diagnosis and surgical treatment was urged by the delegates, in resolutions adopting the report. No other procedure offers hope at present, it was declared.

LISTENING TO HIS DREAM

Easy chair for Father there in the firelight's gleam; Father's dreaming in it, and we listen to his dream.

"Money for the bills That hide the Christmas bills, While they come in regiments I tap the tinkling tills!

"While the folks were on vacation I never slipped the lines; I shoveled golden nuggets from the depth of secret mines.

"Nuggets for the bills That bring the Christmas chills, And now the song of money beats the sweetest whip—poor-will's!"

That's the dream he's dreaming, as we listen, and it seems Too sad to have to wake him when he's dreaming golden dreams!

A cruelty it is! But Jenny—wayward Miss— Shakes her bright curls o'er his brow and wakes him with a kiss!
