ORDERS DINNER FOR FRIENDS

Pat Kelly, While Celebrating,
Becomes Host to Two. But
Fails to Pay Bill.

Pat Kelly appeared in police court this morning, having celebrated Thanksgiving Day not wisely but too well. He was fined $5 for having appeared on the streets in a salubrious condition, and was instructed by City Recorder Butler to pay 75 cents to the Marshfield Chop House for three meals secured by himself and two friends.

"Are you guilty?" demanded City Attorney Kendall.

"I am," said Pat, gracefully.

"Did you start in to celebrate yesterday?"

"Yes, sir."

"You are not what we call a drunkard, are you?" asked Kendall insinuatingly.

"I don't think so, sir," replied Pat sheepishly.

At this point Chief Carter stated to the court that Pat had felt so good yesterday that he took two of his friends into the Marshfield Chop House to "have a Thanksgiving dinner on him," all three leaving without paying for the meals.

"Why didn't you pay up?" asked Kendall.

"I don't remember being in there," replied Pat, apologetically.

Chief Carter stated that Pat had enough small change on him when arrested to settle up with the restaurant, and he was instructed to pay over the amount on behalf of the defendant, who gave an order for his fine of $5.

Spot Cash Sale

THE POWER OF PRICE is the motive with which we appeal to the people of Coos Bay. This power comes from spot cash. That's the way we do business. We buy for less because we pay cash and we sell for less because we sell for cash. Our prices prove this. Come and see.
