FRIENDS BY THE WAY.

Friends by the way! They come and go.
They drift about the world and then,
Victims of various kinds of woes,
They come and call on me again.
They like me very much and so
They borrow five, or maybe ten.

They frankly scorn my mean estate
And of my "wretched bond-a-g" speak;
They call me slave and mourn my fate,
Say I should roam and fortune seek.

And then they borrow six or eight
And promise to repay next week.

Friends by the way, a lordly crew!
You think I love my job too much,
And say that I should dare, like you,
And try my hand at such and such.

And then you ask a bone or two—
Merely a temporary "touch!"

Oh, casual friends, forget to pay;
Ignore me coldly when we meet!
But let me keep my job, I pray,
For if I should with you compete

We all might hunger many a day—
For I must work that you may eat!

WHEN happiness is released it is because it has been sought in the wrong way. It is a common of all the ways of seeking it is to run after it. It is a queer universe in which we are living, and life has many paradoxes. There are treasures which, if they are to be gotten, must not be too ardently pursued. They will come of themselves if one keeps his feet in the path of life. Much depends on putting first things first. Woe to the man or woman who places a good time at the top of his list! He will never get it. Paradise shapes itself only in minds intent on doing the will of God. One can say of happiness what Charles V. said of fortune: "Fortune hath somewhat of the nature of a woman, who, if she be too closely wooed, is commonly the further off."

"We err when we expect a good time to be handed to us. Happiness is not a cake which can be passed over the counter to any person who asks for it. We speak of giving a good time to children. We take the boy to the circus, or the girl to the seashore, where she makes pretty things in the sand. But good times such as these are possible only to children. Grown-up people cannot receive good times from others. Each must create his own. Happiness is an affair of the heart. It is an art of the inner man. Many a woman who is now mooping would be joyful if she had set out as a girl to be the architect of her own happiness, and had not formed the habit of expecting others to give her a good time. Happiness is a heavenly plant and it blossoms only in gardens cultivated and cared for by their owners."

Fox Visible Typewriters

DESCRIPTION—The construction of the Fox Visible Typewriter is a radical departure from that of any other visible machine on the market.

While it is entirely visible, the machine embodies in its construction the same principles that give durability as were found in the invisible models of the Fox Typewriters. All other machines are built on entirely different lines from any blind machine.

It is the mechanical construction of the Fox as well the easy action and convenience of operation that determines its value. Most typewriters write well when new, but it is this construction that determines whether they will "stand up" year in and year out and continue to do satisfactory work. This is what you really pay your money for.

The Fox Visible Typewriter is all that we claim for it, a perfect visible typewriter.

It shows all the writing.
It shows the exact writing line.
It shows the exact printing point.

Let us commence at the top of the Fox and go through it minutely:

INSERTION OF PAPER: Place paper between paper table and platen and turn knob.
MARGINAL STOPS: Set without comparing scales.
TABULATOR: Adapted for all classes of work.
LINE SPACING: Single, double or triple spacing. When carriage is returned to begin new line, the spacing is automatic.

RIBBON MOVEMENT: Single-color ribbon wears four times as long as ribbon on other machines. Cut-off key for stenciling. Accurate and definite automatic reverse.

RACK SPACER: Simple, but positive, action.
PLATEN BRAKE: By pulling detent lever it automatically applies brake.
VARIABLE SPACER: Changes location of writing line on platen. Lengthens life of platen; saves ribbon and type and insures good work.

KEYBOARD: Forty-four keys, 88 characters. Four more than most machines.
TOUCH: Very light. 2 1/2 ounces resistance.
TYPE BAR: Very substantial and strong. Double segment type gate prevents much wear. Can be "taken up" after many years' use.

LINE LOCK: Simple and positive. Absolutely dependable.
STENCIL CUTTER: Very powerful. No dirt or lost time from removing ribbon.
DIRECT PULL: Five bearing points between key button and type. Consequently less friction and resistance than other makes.

BASKET SHIFT: Leaves platen perfectly rigid and stationary. The FOX is the only machine with muffled shift.

ESCAPEMENT: Lightning-like in rapidity. Escapement wheel has sufficient width and hardness to prevent wear.

CARRIAGE MOVEMENT: Easiest movement and lightest tension. Carriages interchangeable. Lengths, 10 1/2, 12, 14 1/2 and 19 inches writing space.

CARD ATTACHMENT: By pulling small lever underneath, the line indicator serves this purpose. It takes the place of an extra card platen which has previously been required.

PAPER FINGERS: Can be removed to any desired point, or adjusted to any thickness of paper.
FEED ROLLS: Two in front and two behind, allowing several sheets of paper to be placed through one side and one sheet through the other with equal exactness.
