GROW MORE CHICKENS

AST week's steamers brought a large shipment of chickens from Portland to Coos Bay for local consumption. This seems like ship-ping coals to Newcastle. Here we nave an almost ideal section for raising chickens and in the Co-quille Valley it is even better. Why shouldn't Coos County produce not only abundant chickens to supply the home demand, but sufficient to ship to both the Portland and San Francisco markets. There should be MANAGER BEDILLION RETURNS money in the chicken business in Coos County. If there isn't it is the lack of organization, united effort and co-operation. Where there is co-operation in the buying of the nec ssary materials, when there is co-operation in exchanging ideas and theories; when there is co-operation, especially in market-ing and selling instead of working separately: when there is co-opera-tion all along the line of organiza-tion, profits are bound to be the At any rate, Coos County should produce enough poultry and poultry products for its own use. Not to do so is evidence of lack thrift, intelligent industry some other def ct for which man and not nature is responsible?

Weaver, Ray Ollivant cular interest attaches to the event. it had its origin in 1864 when three pioneers from Meine, who had been engaged in lobster canning, established themselves on the Sacramento River, California. The industry soon Warner surend from the Sacramento to the Columbia River and thence to Puget Sound and Alaska, where it is now the second industry in importance. Beginning with a small pack valued at a few thousand dollars, the business has developed to an extent never dreamed by its founders. It reached its high water mark in 1913 with a pack of over $,000,000 cases, or more than 400,000,000 cans, valued at $40,000,000. On this coast over 35,000 people are directly employed in the salmon-canning operations and thousands of others are engaged indirectly in the preparation of supply, transportation and distri-bution of the pack.

Though the industry has its seat on this coast, it finds its principal markets id the eastern and southern states and abroad. As a result, t'e huge fortune which it spends each year in outfitting and operation is taken not from the towns and cities from which it is carried on, but carries from the east and foreign countries as so much new money added to the wealth of the coast.

Back in Their Old Location

Greater Store! Bigger Stock! Better Service!

Well, folks, here we are, back in the OLD LOCATION. but back in a NEW STORE.

We've been kept pretty busy since the morning of December 29, but we're not a bit sorry. Hard work never hurt anyone and besides our stock got a thorough cleaning.

Now we're coming back stronger than ever. A certain great sage is quoted as saying that "they never come back"guess he never heard of Lando's.

Things are going to be a little different from now on. We're going to inject a few modern methods into this concern. Just keep your eye on the papers and your mind on Lando's. It will take a little time to get started, but in the meantime the fact remains that we're open for business.

New goods are arriving on every steamer. A large shipment of the famous Carhartt Overalls is en route from the East. Our Spring line of Douglas Shoes is here.
